OFFICIAL PAPER OF NEW BERN AND CRAVEN COUNTY.

THE EVIL OF SOCIAL DRINKING.

In the local columns of the Journal a few days ago, was recorded the fact of the capture of those who were selling drinks in this city, this action of selling being against the law which made New Bern a prohibition city, beginning with January 1st of this year.

This, as it is called, is "blind tigers," is the credited work and effort on the part of those who favor the enforcement of the law against liquor selling, and who believe that the force of the law is the method, and the medium through which temperance can be promoted.

While an example can be made of those who sell liquor, the question is to whom is this liquor sold? Is it to the stranger in town? To the person who has been the hanger on at the open saloon? Or is it to the youth who finds an excitement in getting a drink in prohibition territory?

Prohibition, the wish to shut up the saloons, and prevent the open selling of liquor, may be said to have two classes who desire its enforcement. The first class is composed of the religious people, and those who believe in temperance as a strictly moral issue. The second class is composed of those who may be classed as temperate, but are not total abstainers themselves, but who favor prohibition because it is favorable to their individual business interests.

To the first class, the Journal believes there is a great work for it to perform if it expects or hopes to see true temperance secure a foot hold in this city. While the open saloon no longer offers temptation to the youth of this city, there has gained a wide spread spirit of social drinking, which in its final effects the making of habitual drinkers and eventually drunkards, is an evil which tends to the demoralization of the youth and their ruin as would the open saloon.

The law has closed the open saloon. It has given authority to arrest those who may sell liquor, except by a doctor's prescription, but there is no restraint upon social drinking, and there can be none, except through the moral force of personal persuasion, the attractive force and religious demeanor of the individual who shall show to those who are inclined to social drinking to see the error of so doing, and so break up the habit.

This is no easy work, and yet there should be the same christian force displayed in the effort to reclaim those drinkers, as there was in seeking to close up the open saloon, for prohibition in its moral effect, is void and worthless unless the social side of drinking be closed to the youth, through a treatment which stands for christianity and morality, the preservation of the home, and the approval placed upon those who are temperate in their lives, because temperance stands for good morals and a clean citizenship.

Annual Report of Home Mission Society of Centenary Church

From February 1904 to February 1905.

At the last meeting of the Society the annual report of the various officers showed marked progress in all the departments of the work. The membership has steadily increased until it now numbers 127. The activities of the Society have been quite evident in promoting the interests of the local work. 316 vietas have been made to the sick, 228 papers and leaflets distributed and 245 garments have been given to the needy.

The financial increase has been commensurate with the increase of membership.

A contribution of $59 was made to the Methodist Orphanage. Two boxes valued at $75 were contributed to two mission preachers within our Conference. $53 was expended on improvement of personages, and a contribution of $500 made to the New Church Building Fund. The total amount raised by the Society for all purposes during the year is $1365.75. The regular monthly meetings of the Society are well attended, and the cause of Home Mission is growing in the loyalty and love of our people.

Davis Pharmacy Usual Offer.

"It isn't often that we have faith enough in the medicine put up by other people to be willing to offer to refund the money if it does not cure," said Davis Pharmacy to a Journal man who dropped into their store, "but we are glad to sell Dr. Howard's specific for the cure of constipation and dyspepsia on that basis."

"The Dr. Howard Company, in order to get a quick introductory sale, authorize us to sell their regular fifty cent bottles at half-price, 25 cents, and, although we have sold a lot of it, and have guaranteed every package, not one has been brought back as unsatisfactory."

"One great advantage of this specific," he continued, "is its small dose and convenient form. There are sixty doses in a vial that can be carried in the vest, pocket or purse, and every one has more medicinal power than a big pill or tablet or a tumbler of mineral water."

"We are still selling the specific at half-price, although we cannot tell how long we shall be able to do so, and anyone who is subject to constipation, sick headache, dizziness, liver trouble, indigestion, or a general played-out condition ought to take advantage of this chance. You can tell your readers that if they are not satisfied with the specific they can come right back to our store and we will cheerfully refund their money."

Farmers Aroused, Outlook Good.

A house to house canvass of the third township shows that 2,400 acres were planted last year and pledges have been made in said township for a reduction of 1900 acres making a clear reduction of 40 per cent, with a little larger proportional reduction in fertilizers.

I have never seen farmers more determined, since they fought and whipped the Jute barging trust and they are going to fight this battle to the finish and gain another victory. If the third township is a fair sample of the cotton belt generally.

We will work on the first township this week and hope to find the farmer generally looking out for his best interests.

PROTECT YOURSELF AGAINST GERMS.

People With Weak Stomachs Most Liable to Catch Diseases.

When the stomach and digestive organs are weak, the food does not digest, and there is a sour, slimy, fermenting mass, making it an ideal spot for the disease germ to multiply. The only way to protect yourself against disease germs is to strengthen the stomach and digestive organs, and this is the only agent, so far as is known, that will accomplish this.

The ordinary medicine that is taken for indigestion and stomach troubles is advertised to act upon the food alone, and hence can give no more than temporary relief. All-around stomach cure is all-around stomach strength, so saying, because it enables the stomach and digestive organs to act in the way Nature intended they should.

Drugs cannot digest the food, they simply decompose it. If you suffer with distress after eating, pains in the head, chest, sides and back, belching of gases and indigestion, but taste in the mouth, flatulence, or other symptoms, you should at once try Chamberlain's Colic, Cholera and Diarrhoea Remedy.

It is the only medicine that can cure all the diseases of the blood. It is the only medicine that can cure all the diseases of the blood. It is the only medicine that can cure all the diseases of the blood.

BORORO INDIANS.

How the Name of This Brazilian Tribe Got Their Name.

In an interesting article on the aborigines of Brazil in the current Southern Workman the method of naming boys is thus described:

The ceremony of initiation into the rights and privileges of citizenship in the Bororo tribe is interesting. The little boy's body of the baby boy is more or less damped with gum or pitch and plastered with white feathers; then early in the morning before the rising of the sun the family and friends and the priest or conjurer betake themselves to an eminence near the village. And at the sun the supreme power, sweeps majestically upward from beyond the eastern wilderness the conjurer hovers the lower lip of the embryo warrior with an instrument made especially for the occasion and beautifully decorated with brilliant feathers and at the same time whispers "Pitudu" (humming bird) or the name of some other animal or object that the child is to bear. "Pitudu" softly repeat the family and friends in turn, and thus Pitudu, a favorite name, becomes the name of the little one. They are very jealous of their names and will not make them known to aliens.

In order to become a citizen of the tribe a person of alien birth would have to reside with it for some time and be initiated much as the child is.

TEA A WEEK OLD.

The "Real Good Old Post and Mail" of Australia.

The tea drinkers of Australia rival those of China and Japan, not, however, in the quality, but in the quantity consumed. The men especially drink the beverage in large quantities and all day long and at a strength which would make the eye of a tea drinking Chinaman start. On Sunday morning the tea drinker starts with a clean pot and a clean record. The pot is hung over the fire, with a sufficiency of water in it for the day's brew, and when this is boiled he pours into it enough of the fragrant herb to produce a deep coffee colored liquid.

On Monday, without removing yesterday's tea leaves, he repeats the process, on Tuesday the same, likewise on Wednesday, and so on through the week. Toward the close of the seven days the pot is filled with an acid mash of tea leaves, out of which the tea is squeezed by the pressure of a tin cup. By this time the tea is the color of rusty iron, incredibly bitter and disagreeable to the uneducated palate. The natives call it "real good old post and mail," the simile being obviously drawn from a stiff and dangerous jump, and regard it as having been brought to perfection.

THE ROMAN ARENAS.

They Were Not Mere Rings, as Those of the Modern Circus.

The arenas of ancient Rome were not, as some people suppose, mere rings or ovals, such as may be seen in the modern circus. They were broken up and varied in character according to the nature of the fighting to be done or to the caprices of those in authority. On one occasion an arena might resemble the Numidian desert, on another the garden of Hesperides, thick set with groves of trees and rising mounds, while again it pictured the great rocks and caves of Thrace.

With these surroundings the combatants advanced, retreated, encircled their adversaries or kept wild boasts as they occasion offered or as their courage or fear suggested. Men combated not only with the more common brutes, but with such monsters as elephants, rhinoceroses, hippopotamuses and crocodiles. On other occasions flocks of game, such as deer and raptorial birds, were abandoned to the multitude, and in some cases the arenas could be turned into lakes, filled with monsters of the deep, and upon the surface of which naval engagements took place.

The Word "Jimnasha."

The word jimnasha comes from three Japanese roots, Jim-riki-sha, meaning respectively man, power, carriage, but it is not of Japanese origin. It is thought to have been introduced into the English language by the Japanese, who have been for some time in the habit of using the word to designate a light, compact and light, and was first used in the heavy carriage have been entirely dispensed with.

The Japanese Ideal of Bravery.

There is a time when death is much easier for a man than to fulfill his duty, and if he dies just for the sake of death he cannot execute the duty that is assigned him. True bravery is not in throwing away one's life or enduring death, but in doing one's duty at the hazard of one's life. You must not forget that - From "A Daughter of Japan," by Mabel Gensel.

HORACE GREELEY.

The Gentle, Braggart and Welcome Farmhouse Intruder.

"When Horace Greeley was first married and brought his bride home on a visit," said an old acquaintance, "a sugar party was given in their honor on a neighboring farm. All the guests had arrived, and we were looking out watching for the belated bride and groom. At last we saw something appearing in the distance. As this same object came nearer we discovered it was the old white horse of the Greeleys slowly picking his way through the mud. On his back sat the bride in a brilliant yellow frock, with a green velvet belt, and behind her, wrapped in his famous white overcoat, sat the editor of the New York Tribune. It was the funniest sight I ever saw and set us off in fits of laughing. I remember that I simply lay down and rolled upon the floor in a spasmodic mirth."

"Mr. Greeley came home every year and after a day or two on the farm would start out to walk miles and call on people. He was never known to knock at a farmhouse door. No matter whether he knew the inmates or not he would push open the door, walk right in, sit down by the fireplace and fall to discussing crops and other topics dear to the farmer's heart. Everybody was glad to welcome this gentle, brusque intruder."

AFRICAN SANDSTORMS.

The Conditions Which Bring About These Deadly Blasts.

The sandstorms of African deserts are caused by the great power of the sun's rays, the extreme dryness of the air and the small conducting power of the sand. The superficial layers of sand in the deserts of Africa and Arabia often become heated to 200 degrees F. to a depth of several inches.

The air resting on this hot sand becomes also greatly heated, thus causing ascending currents. As a result air flows in from all sides, and different currents meeting, cyclones are formed, which are swept onward by the wind preerrating at the time. Since the temperature of the air, originally high, is still further raised by the heated grains of sand with which it is loaded, it rapidly increases to a most intolerable degree. In the shade it has been known to reach 120 degrees. It is to the parching dryness of this wind, its glowing heat and its choking dust and not, as is sometimes supposed, to any poisonous qualities it possesses that its destructive effects on animal life are to be ascribed. The effects of sandstorms are most terrible, large caravans being frequently overwhelmed and destroyed by them. It was by their agency that the armies of Cambyses and Sennacherib were annihilated.

Deep Sea Animals.

How These Who Live Below All Vegetation Get Their Food.

"Naturally the fish of the deep portopos of the ocean are carnivorous, no vegetable life being found below 200 fathoms," writes W. S. Harwood in Harper's Magazine. "In the Atlantic ocean the vast Sargasso sea, containing 3,000,000 square miles of surface - a great marine prairie as large as the whole of the United States exclusive of Alaska and dependent islands - affords vegetable food for uncountable animals, which in their due time die and are precipitated to the depths, their bodies in turn to be eaten by the animals which live far below all vegetation. So it is throughout the whole ocean; animal life is constantly falling from the surface waters for the support of the animal life of the abyss. A very large number of the deep sea animals are exceedingly tenacious or tenacious in form - so to put it - having no special organs of nutrition, but taking in their nourishment through the walls of their bodies, appropriate from the water the food which suits them. Some of them have a bony structure, a skeleton, which they form also from the water, silica and carbonate of lime being the chief skeleton forming materials."

Had a Derelict In Town.

A naval officer one day noticed two men in earnest confab. One of them was imparting information to his companion of a very agreeable nature judging from his beaming countenance. The officer in relating the incident says the manner of the speaker amused him very much. As he passed by the man raised his voice, with the unmistakable intonation of being overboard saying to his companion, "I have been thinking of giving this sea-going life when my time is out. I am going to marry a rich widow woman, the dearest of a bachelor."

The Corded Shark.

The smiling shark may not be a real shark and though scientific doubt it-but if he does man get even. He makes stink soup and jelly of the smiling shark's skin, extracts fine machinery oil from his liver, makes head from his backbone and many stick-articles from his jawbones and teeth. Do you wonder that the shark takes a nip at a man's leg now and then? - Daily News-Tribune.

OFFENSIVE CATARRH

I suffered for a long time with a bad case of Catarrh, and took a great deal of medicine without any benefit. I had a continual headache, my cheeks had grown purple, my nose was always stopped up, my breath had a sickening and disgusting odor, and I coughed incessantly. I heard of your S. S. Brown, Cor. 7th & Felix Sts., St. Joseph, Mo.

Wheeling, W. Va., May 29, 1905. I had Naasal Catarrh for years for which I used S. S. S. with very gratifying results. I tried local applications for some time, and getting no permanent relief I came to the conclusion that the seat of the trouble was in the blood. Knowing S. S. S. to be a good blood medicine I began its use, and after using it for some little while it did away entirely with the offensive mucus in the nostrils, and I did not have to hawk and spit, especially in the morning, to dislodge the catarrhal matter. 1627 South St. FRED H. The Duke and the Barber.

In an old days an English noble entered a barber shop, and upon inquiring for the master, was answered by an apprentice of fourteen that he was not at home. "Do you shave, then?" asked the duke. "Yes, sir, I always do," was the reply. "But can you shave without cutting?" "Yes, sir, I'll try," answered the youth. "Very well," said the duke, while seating himself and leaning on his chair. "But look here, if you let my head, as true as I'll give you my brains out. Now, consider well before you begin."

After a moment's reflection the boy began to make ready and said, "I'm not afraid of cutting you, sir," and in a short time had completed the feat without a scratch, to the complete satisfaction of the duke. In gentle tones his grace asked, "Were you not afraid of having your brains blown out when you might have cut me so easily?" "No, sir, not at all, because I thought that as soon as I should happen to let any blood I would cut your throat before you could have time to fire."

The reply won from the duke a handsome reward. It need scarcely be added he never resumed his dangerous thrills in a barber shop. A lesson was taught him for life.

Beck's Narrow Escape.

David Beck, the celebrated portrait painter and pupil of Vandyke, while traveling through Germany was suddenly taken ill and to all appearances died and was laid out in a coffin. His servants, sitting round the bed, grieved heartily for the loss of so good a master, and as grief is thirsty drank as heartily at the same time. One of them, becoming more befuddled than the rest, then addressed his companions thus: "Our minister when alive was fond of his glass. Let us out of gratitude, then, give him one now he is dead."
