The merger which took place today is very gratifying to the officers of the Southern Cotton Association, in view was president of the National Cotton Association, is also vice-president of the Southern Cotton Association, and who will now have active charge of the work of the latter association west of the Mississippi river.

The success of the Southern Cotton Association has been very marked in all of the old States east of the Mississippi River and in Arkansas. There can be no question that the entire business and farming element in the great State of Texas will quickly take hold of this movement and in the near future, it is confidently predicted that the men. bership of the Association will excee in Texas the membership in any other State or Territory throughout the cotton belt. The consolidation of the two associations guarantee perfect harmony for the future, and indicates more than all things else, that the officers of the two associations are more deeply interested in the success of the people of the South than any advancement of the personal interest of any particular or ganization.
