BLACKSMITS

PAWNBROKERS.

They Are, Says One of Them, the When a New York policeman recent ly borrowed jewelry of a pawnbroke on his beat to wear to a "party," the story led to much comment. In the optulon of the pawnbroker most of the gossip was entirely uncalled for. "People are making a tremendous fuss about that little deal," he said. "They seem to think it one of the wonders of the age for a pawnbroker to lend anything unless he gets big interest on it. Pawnbrokers are really the soul of generosity. I make loans every week. Of course I don't let things ou indiscriminately. A fellow that can touch me for the use of an umbrella or a diamond ring for the night has to be pretty well known as a square chap who is not going to run off with the goods. There are a number of such men around in this part of town, and when they stand in need of some spe cial convenience that I happen to be able to supply to them from my stock of unclaimed pledges I am glad to ac commodate them. The stuff always comes back safe, accompanied by a little tip, so I don't lose anything by trusting my friends.

"I have one woman on my list of borrowers. She and her family have traded here for years. One day she pawned her opera glasses and never got them out, and since then whenever she has a chance to go to the play she asks for the loan of a pair of glasses. She is too good a customer to be refused a little favor like that, so of course gets them In the capacity of a public benefactor I have loaned overcoats, gloves, walking sticks, rings and about everything else known to the masculine get-up Those lonns are made to friends and reliable people only, and no grafters need apply."-New York Post.

INAUGURATION BALLS.

The First Was Madison's, Saturday

Evening, March 4, 1809. Four hundred guests, as all the con temporaneous accounts agree, gathered at the first inauguration ball, which took place on the evening of Saturday. March 4, 1809, at Mr. Long's hotel, on Capitol hill, in celebration of the acession to the presidency of James Madison. Each of the three presidents who had preceded him in office had been permitted to close the day of his inauguration by going early to bed. General Washington and John Adams had been inaugurated at temporary capitols, and Thomas Jefferson would have rebelled against a ceremony plainly modeled upon the customs of royalty, but when Madison's inauguration came the new federal city had been a visible fact for nine years and was determined to assert a right to enjoy itself. Even in doing so it followed a habit always hitherto associ ated with the celebration of the coro nation of kings.

Royal customs were really the only ones the people knew, for every Amer lean in Washington over thirty-two years of age had been born the subject of a king, and the new order of things had not given birth to new ideas o how to manifest rejoicing. Moreover, if the method chosen seems to some to have been an imitation of monarchical customs, they should reflect in extenustion that it is an instinct of man oequal with his feeling the sensation of pleasure to show his joy by dancing So an official ball closed the day of Madison's inauguration and has closed the inauguration day of every president who has succeeded him.-Gall-
