Weekly Crop Bulletin, May 8, 1905.

The past week has been exceptionally favorable for the rapid germination of seeds and the growth of vegetation. The temperature continued uniformly, but not excessively high, the mean for the week being about 70°, ot 3° daily above the normal. The early portion of the week was fair and sunny, but after the third showers were frequent, keeping the air and soil moist and highly favorable for the growth of favorable for the growth of crops. Generally the precipitation was moderate in amount and beneficial, but in a number of counties the rains were frequent and farm work was interrupted, as the soil was too wet to plow. In a few western counties, notably Madison, Davle and Wilkes, heavy, washing rains, in some instances with hail, occurred on the 5th with considerable damage to crops and land locally Rapid progress in planting and cultivating crops continued during the early portion of the week, but was discontinued in most of the central and southern counties after Wednesday. In some section on account of the very rapid growth of vegetation grass and weeds are beginning to be a little troublesome, week, especialy on uplands in the west; lowlands are at present too wet to plant; corn is coming up remarkably well and good stands seem acsured two dollars and costs. everywhere; cultivation of young corn is proceeding; the only damage so far reported to corn by insects results from rayages by cut worms in several counties, chiefly in the west. Planting cotton made favorable progress early in the week, though interrupted towards the close; planting is about finished in during the next week or two.
