GRANITE TESTIMONIAL TO MEMORY OF FALLEN HEROES

Impressive Ceremonies At The Unveiling of New Jersey Soldiers' Monument.

Many Distinguished People Become The City's Guests. They Participate In The Exercises And Are Accorded Due Mark of Recognition.

MONUMENT TO THE 9TH, NEW JERSEY.

"The muffled drum's sad roll has beat The soldiers' last tattoo;
No more on life's parade shall meet The brave and fallen few.
On fame's eternal camping ground;
Their silent tents are spread,
And glory guards with sacred round The bivouac of the dead."

THEODORE O'HARA.

Almost a half century has passed since this country was drenched in the blood of men engaged in awful warfare.
Times has obliterated the differences created by that war and the north and south are bound together in ties of friendship and love that nothing can sever. The boys in gray and the boys in blue drink from the same canteen, share the same rations and enjoy each others companionship and regard it a priceless privilege to meet each other in peace.

Evidence of the war are in every section and as long as time lasts, as long as men have sympathetic gratitude in their hearts, as long as the star of peace shines over our fair land will men revere the memories of those who fell in that war. History records no more terrific struggle than that which the events of yesterday commemorated in the dedication of the monument erected to the memory of the soldiers of New Jersey who sleep their last sleep in our National Cemetery by the survivors of the Ninth Volunteer Regiment of the State.

The monument is a beautiful and substantial memorial in granite which will be as a testimonial to coming generations and will speak loud in its eloquent silence "Behold how we loved." No fiery impassioned tongue of eloquence, no flowery, soul stirring verse, no facile pen of the ready writer can express the undying love that exist among comrades of the war for their fallen brothers, the evidence of which we have just witnessed.

The historical incidents for which the events of yesterday were in memory are matters of record and lack of space prevents the Journal making a detailed sketch of them, except to mention the fact that the soldiers in whose memory the monument was erected were members of the Ninth New Jersey Regiment.
There are 85 graves. The men died in hospitals or were killed in engagements in this section or having died after the war closed were brought here and buried.

or practically in the middle of the ceremony.

The inscriptions on the stone are as follows: On the main face--

"The State of New Jersey to Her Ninth Regiment Volunteer Infantry, whose Heroic Dead Lie Buried in This Cemetery.

1861--1864

Erected 1905."

Reverse face--

"Mastered In Oct. 1861.

Mustered Out July, 1865.

On the sides are the names of the battles fought by this regiment. They were Roanoke Island, New Bern, Ft.
Macon, Goldsboro, Fort Walthall, Drew-ery's Bluff, Cold Harbor and Petersburg."

The weather was ideal. The sun beamed genially on the multitude and a gentle breeze softened the heat which would naturally have resulted at this season of the year. Probabilities favor ed the old soldiers to the greatest degree.

The crowd in attendance has variously been estimated at from 3000 to 7000 people. Although there is no means of obtaining an accurate count there is no doubt that the vast assembly at the cemetery numbered 5000 people at least.
The representation from the country districts and from Pamlico, Carteret, Onslow and Jones counties were very large both by team and train, then the people from other portions of the State and the New Jersey delegations all tended to give the crowd big proportions.

The late arrival of the train on which Gov. Stokes came and also the Goldsboro and Kinston companies of the North Carolina National Guard necessarily made the exercises at the cemetery considerably later than the time appointed. The distinguished governor from New Jersey was met at the train by North Carolina's governor and his staff. The governor's suite of 17 guns was fired and the band played the American Melody introducing many tunes which are favorites with the American public. The circumstances in which the governor set his foot on New Bern soil were indeed strenuous.
As little delay was made in organizing the line of march to the cemetery as possible. Upon the return to Broad street from the depot the procession was re-ordered by the New Jersey Veterans and the Confederate Veterans.
The order of march was as follows:

The Knights of Pythias band; Old Guard Army of the Republic and Confederate Veterans, about 125 strong; carriage carrying Governor Stokes and Gen.
Stewart containing members of Gov.
Stokes' staff accompanied by ladies; officers in uniform; New Bern Musical Society; New Bern Band; members of the North Carolina National Guard; from Raleigh, Goldsboro and Kinston.

It is estimated that there were over five hundred in the procession and it made a very impressive sight as it passed up National Avenue.

A gracious deed was the decoration of the Confederate Soldiers' Monument in Maple Grove Cemetery by a committee of the New Jersey Veterans under the direction of a number of members of the local camp. After arriving at cemetery the old soldiers passed around the monument and deposited their floral tokens. Gov. G. T. Adams led in prayer and immediately thereafter the cords loosened securing the veil and the monument was disclosed to the public view in all its beauty. The unveiling was accomplished by four ladies, Mrs.
Gen. Stewart and Miss Drake of New Jersey and Misses Adelaid Claypool and Isabel Bryan.

Gen. James Stewart was then introduced and gave a succinct and very interesting account of the career of the ninth regiment and its campaigns in North Carolina. He said they were organized as riflemen. They were men from the higher walks of life. Students forsook their schools, lawyers and doctors gave up their practice and ministers resigned their pulpits to answer to President Lincoln's call to arms.
After the usual preliminaries of assigning troops the Ninth New Jersey was put into Gen. Burnside's brigade.

The regiment came to New Bern in the spring of 1861 and on March 18th, the battle of New Bern was fought.
The work of the regiment mostly consisted in engagements and skirmishes in this section. The record of the battles has already been mentioned in this story. The regiment was assigned here at three different times, the last being at the time of the surrender of Lee at Appomattox. The general then presented the monument to Gov. Stokes, who accepted the temporary ownership of it with a most excellent speech.

His excellency paid a warm compliment to the State of North Carolina for her generous hospitality. He made a happy comparison between Governor Glenn of North Carolina and himself, stating that if the latter was a specimen of Governors that the Old North State was in the habit of having he was going to live hereafter in the country where Governors grow big. He made allusions to the bravery and valor of the North Carolina Soldier and to the States interest in common with that of New Jersey. He said the men of New Jersey also went to war. They left their homes, their professions, farms, business interests and all to defend their country. These men were not professional warriors; they did not go to the war for the sake of fighting but it was in defense of a principal more vital than life itself. When the war was over and they were discharged from their duties, they returned to their homes and loved ones to assume the tasks they had left.

Gov. Stokes released his temporary ownership by transferring it to the captivity of Major G. W. Thornton as representative of the United States government who in a few fitting words accepted the trust.

We very sincerely regret that lack of space prevents giving verbatim the beautiful and highly praised speech of Gov. Glenn on this occasion. It was an address which kept the wrapt attention of the immense throng in silence except when he made a remark eliciting applause. By that he endeared himself in the hearts of his people a hundred fold and he will ever be remembered with affection and veneration by our visitors.

The events of last night were of an intensely interesting nature and again we must repeat that we can not give the account in full, as it is not only interesting, but valuable. The meeting at the court house especially was one of the most stirring episodes which must have been seen to be appreciated and has a significance far reaching than mere local interests but it affects a large community. The "Plover boy flag" long in the possession of this Ninth New Jersey Regiment which was given into the keeping of Governor Glenn Wednesday night, was returned by him to Mrs. Mary Joyner, who as Mary Winfield made the flag and presented it to Capt. Harding of Beaufort Plover Co. Mrs. Joyner came from Columbia, S. C. to receive the flag and that lady returned it to Capt. Harding's son who represented his father, the latter being too ill to be present. Both Mrs. Joyner's and Mr. Harding's remarks were received with much enthusiasm.

Later the last of the events took place. An elaborate banquet was served at the Chatterbox hotel which was given Governor Glenn and staff and a few New Bern citizens by the visitors from New Jersey. Speeches and toasts followed the banquet and the affair was very enjoyable.

The Daughters of the Confederacy gave the visiting New Jersey ladies a reception in their rooms simultaneously with the banquet and a tie of friendship was made which will never be broken.
The visitors left the city on special train last night and their stay among us will be long remembered by the citizens as one of the most pleasant gatherings in the history of the city.

General J. Marian Drake of Elizabeth N. J. Said:

Mr. Chairman:
I am truly glad that my life has been spared through long years to witness today's scenes and this spectacle, and I rejoice at the true soldierly spirit that animates every heart present. I rejoice, my countrymen, that after four years of fierce battle, followed by many years of distress, misunderstanding, prejudice and hate, the Veteran Soldiers of the South and the North, those who fought under Grant, Thomas, Sheridan, Kearny and Burnside, and those who upheld the banner of the South under Lee, Johnson, Jackson and Forrest and Fitzhugh Lee, Gordon and Hampton, can re-unite in any State of the Union, beneath the starry flag, each resolved that henceforth and forever we have but one standard, one nation, and a common destiny.

We have no apology for a single blow struck for the Union, nor do we wish to remind you of those you struck against it. We do not offensively boast of our deeds of daring, nor do we praise you for yours. We came here to perform a sacred duty, not to boast, not to talk; and now that you have clasped our hands and broken the bread of peace, we desire to be friends, faithful and forever true.

We of the North rejoice in the realization of a perfect restored Union.
You cannot, if you would, and should not if you could, forget that you fought bravely and well for the cause you thought was right, yet at the same time we trust that you have truly said to us: "Soldier of the North, we are with you; our lives have been spared; we fought the best we knew; we risked our fortunes; all is lost; we risked our honor, that is saved." Our reply is: "There, there, that is enough; this is your home; this is your country; not another world."

We are living in a hopeful time. Each day is full of the sunshine of a new and glorious promise for the future welfare of our great Republic. But should our soil be invaded we will all be found fighting on one side--the North would feel the touch of the Southern elbow--all would march to the music of the Union.

Here is the Northerner who madly charged the Southern's batteries; here is the Southerner who plunged into Northern powder smoke in the search for victory; here, fraternally commending, are men who in the lurid glare of battle, with free shouts and scorn of death, flung themselves with equal bravery each against the other, showing the world then how Americans could fight--now, how Americans can forgive.

Yes, I say forgive--I do not say forget. I would not ask that the past be forgotten. I would not wipe out the recollections of the sad but glorious past. I would not forget the martial renewal won upon a thousand fields by Northern and Southern soldiers; I would not blot out my memories of the sturdy valor of my comrades of the Ninth New Jersey, nor the gallant devotion of you of the South--both are the itching. I was scratching all day and night, and I could get no rest. I washed my head with hot water and Cuti-cura Soap and then applied the box of Cuti-cura Ointment and one cake of Cuti-cura Soap cured me. Now my head is entirely clear and my hair is growing splendidly. I have used Cutidear to the hearts of every American.

We fought you not because we hated you, but because every sentiment of honor and patriotism demanded of us that we should transmit unimpaired to our children and yours the priceless heritage left us by your fathers and ours.

Let no more fratricidal struggle ever disfigure this beautiful land, but let the glory and prosperity of one section be that of every other, so that our country may continue on its happy and prosperous career.

Let us hope that we shall have no more to do with war; but by the hour of our grief, by the memory of our dead, by the never-ending sorrow of the living, for the honor of our country and our flag, and for the sake of American manhood, let us strive to keep this beautiful land the heritage of those who love liberty and free institutions.

"The Strategists."

The above entitled comedy was presented Thursday night at the theatre, and as previously announced it provoked a good deal of mirth and was greatly enjoyed by the "Angels" in the sky parlor, but the play is not one in which the talents of the troupe's good actors can be best displayed. It The company has given a good repertoire during the week, and notwithstanding other attractions and entertainments incident upon yesterday's ceremonies, a fairly good house was in attendance.

Tonight the company will present the "Restoration", which is an unusually strong play, and no doubt the star, Miss Reicks will come to the ring again.
Another feature will be the singing of "The Holy City" by Prof. Russell, the leader of the orchestra.
