IMMIGRANTS TO HELP NOT BUREEN

The inquiry on every side in the South, for laborers, has aroused the movement to seek immigrants, specially those from foreign shores, and the great number coming, just at present nearly a million a year, makes it very tempting to secure a turn in this tide. and get it headed towards the South, with its vacant fields, in need of cultivation, in order that they may yield abundant and profitable crops.

But however much the South needs laborers, and new people to develop its natural resources, there should be no rush made to gather in immigrants. just because they can be secured.

From Washington comes the following, which is of special interest to those who may be seeking immigrants for the South:

United States Consul Henry W. Diederich, whose post is at Bremen, Germany, has sent to the State Department an exhaustive report upon the condition of the immigrants passing through that port on their way to the United States. The Russians now flocking across the Atlantic, he says, are recruited from the lowest and most degraded of the Czar's unhappy subjects. "Since I entered upon my present duties," he says, "I have seen 611, 492 emigrants pass through Bremen, but official candor compels me to say that some of these Russian refugees belonged to a lower type than I had ever seen. As they are led through the streets of this United States Consul Henry W. Diede these Russian refugees belonged to a lower type than I had ever seen. As they are led through the streets of this city to the dock of the Argo Steamship Line, to be transported to England, it is a common remark heard on every hand, "How can England and America receive such people?" Yet the Bremen population is hardened to such sights, the main streets of the city being daily thronged by emigrants of all nationalities on their way to other countries. "Should the war continue, this rush of "Should the war continue, this rush of the fugitive Russians to our country will also continue, and I cannot help desirable. Unfortunately, our present immigration laws do not reach them They impress one as being more or less than the state of them.

While the labor market of the South is a yast one, it is possible to overstock Sprained Ankle. Stiff Neck, Lame it by what may be termed fugitive emigrants from Europe, and these by their very cheapness would prove a burden which would operate against the South's development, not alone mater ially, but morally and educationally.

As is well known Mr. George leaves New Bern only because his physician declares he must do so. It is with deep regret which every one feels, that this necessity exists, demanding Mr. George's departure, for he is both respected and loved by his parish, as well as by the people of the city, and throughout this section of North Carolina.

At the morning service, Sunday, the text was taken from Ephesians, third chapter, the fourteenth verse to the end of the chapter. The speaker said these words of St. Paul's seemed to him most appropriate at this time, and expressive of what he had tried to do during his rectorship of over fifteen years. A number of special points were dwelt upon, peculiarly pertinent to this parish and its members.

In closing Mr. George said it was with regret and sorrow that circums strength and its purposes.
