A GREAT SUCCESS

Dixon's Clansman Greeted by Two Great Audiences.

A Production That Needs Seeing Before Criticizing. A Play Intensely Dramatic and One Which Cannot Fail in Its Popularity.

An audience which filled every seat and found extra chairs necessary greeted "The Clansman" last night. It was an audience which followed with keenest interest and sympathy every word and action of the play, feeling intensely the splendid presentation, laughing at its comedy, hissing at certain parts, and applauding where only applause would relieve the strain of pent up emotions.

There were in the audience many outsiders from all points along the line of the A. & N. C. road, and the sales of seats of the two performances, afternoon and night, break all previous records, the total being reported as something like $1800.

There is a divided opinion among people as to whether plays like The Clansman is productive of any good results or not. Some critics are disposed to let the dead bury its dead; that there is enough misery without digging up the black memories of the past. These critics, however, should remember, that there are other disagreeable historical occurrences which have been given dramatic action, which afford plenty of precedents for The Clansman; and, if there is anything repellent and unnecessary in producing such a play there is a morbid nature that craves and demands it and The Clansman has as good material for the satisfying of such natures as any play that has preceded it.

It is not the purpose of the Journal to enter into a lengthy discussion of the right or wrong of the play as written by Mr. Dixon. It simply wishes to comment on the play. The Clansman presents most admirably the condition of the south at the close of the war. It shows how necessary was the existence of such a stern, relentless band of men as were the Ku Klux Klan, and how it was the means to the end of effecting for all time white supremacy.

The character which was super eminent in the production last night was Silas Lynch, the colored Lt. Governor of South Carolina. Big physically and mentally, his machinations and plotting were the things that kept the interest at the highest possible pitch. Before him the Governor covered like a whipped cur; to him were the matters of state referred until like a tyrant he overreached his power and went to his doom. In the portrayal of this character Austin Webb was superb.

The Clansman was Ben Cameron, a member of a prominent Southern family who have suffered the misfortunes of war and the greater misfortunes of the northern renegeades. He joined the Klan and was made the chief. The romance of the play develops in the love of Cameron for Eleis Stinson, the daughter of his bitterest enemy, Auntie Stinson, radical, reconstructionist and one who advocated negro equality up to a certain degree. Frankie Ritchie represented this character and whether he was dealing with renege Lynch, the weak Stimp, with the Klan or making love to the beautiful Miss Stinson he was a man to be admired.

Miss Virginia Darr, Claire McDowell and Alberta Lee were the prominent ladies of the play and performed their parts faultlessly while little Violet Montgomery as Flora was high applause from audience. When the old-fashioned negro one drew his wife with the last negro character ever seen on the stage and their elderly parents were natural and greatly pleased the audience.

Big Crowd in Town

The advent of "The Clansman" was the cause of a large number of strangers in New Bern yesterday. The train brought in delegations to the extent of about two hundred, and many drove in from some parts of the county. In fact it has been a long time that so much interest has been manifested in a play as was shown yesterday. The mail train brought thirty people from Beaufort and intervening towns. The shoofly also had a few passengers from the north who attended the matinee. The returning mail train due here at 5:52 p. m. had an extra car to accommodate the passengers who were desirous of seeing the play. A special train took the visitors home after the night performance.

Return of Favorites

A. G. Allen's New Orleans Minstrel who were here two years ago and gave such general satisfaction that many who witnessed their performance at the time are still sounding their praise and claim it was by far the best minstrel performance seen here in years. The company is billed to appear in New Bern October 16th.

The company is said to include all the old favorites and has been augmented considerably in point of members. Many new features have been added and the performance is said to be fully up to and even better than the high standard of excellence set by them when here last. The seating arrangements of the tent have been re-arranged and every care has been taken for the comfort and convenience of the patrons so that they can enjoy a first class minstrel performance under canvas and at a price of admission much less than what is usually charged by minstrel shows.
