THE PRESIDENT'S MESSAGE. President Roosevelt's Message to the

Fifty-ninth Congress, cannot be said to contain anything new, as to National questions, particularly on those questions and issues which the Republican party stands for and for which that party is spensor. It might be said the message is strangely silent on those hithertofore standard issues, tariff and and one to be relied upon every time. money, but it must be remembered We also find it the best remedy for that the present position of the Republican party is to maintain on both an sale by Davis Pharmacy and F. S. unaltered and non-argumentative atti- Duffy. tude, or in the language of the political forum, to be "standpatters."

In this position in his message, the President is strictly a party man. But on the issue of railroad rate legislation, which has been before the country for some months, a subject which needs no three wild turkeys. special repeating, as it is a subject well known, on this issue it does appear that is improving. the President has not the entire support of his party, rather the opposition of a number of powerful leaders, white there is among the lesser lights in Congress a questionable support, or at least a support which is likely to be as agreeable to some substitute, as for and will grow tobacco next season, and any bill that may be offered by the will also tend a crop of turpentine. President, or by his direction.

The question of interstate railroad regulation by an appointive board, is variously construed, that is whether it is socialistic, democratic, populistic or of the above.

The message shows the Roosevelt etyle in composition and profuseness, taking some 25,000 words in its length. werest in each department, covering what the President deems important are concerning each department, and the different sections of the country, including our island posses

But the real importance of the mes ze is its possible effect upon new beg.slation, which shall, like the proposed railroad regulation rate, disturb existing industrial and commercial conclitions. It is this which every interest In he work of Congress now assembled never without it in the house." How's This?

A rare old book, called "The Living thors of England," published in the commences with a study of Wordsworth, in which is recorded what is said to be the only loke the poet ever served that he did not consider himself a witty poet. "Indeed," he said.
"I do not think I was ever witty but once in my life."

Being pressed to tell the company what this special drollery was, the poet said, with some hesitation: "Well, I will fell you. I was standing some time ago at the entrance of my cottage at Rydal Mount when a man accosted me with the question, 'Pray, sir, have you seen my wife pass by? whereupon I answered, 'Why, my good friend, I didn't know till this moment that you had a wife!' The company stared and upon realiz-

He Had References.

In her book "A Southern Girl In '61' Mrs. D. Giraud Wright tells a capital story about General John C. Breckinsidge of Kentucky. He was invited by a certain lady of rank in London to uncheon. The lady had just advertised for a footman Mistaking the hour. General Breckhiridge reached the house before the appointed time and by some accident was ushered into Lads Blank's presence without being announced. The day was in June. Ow ing to the heat the blinds were drawn, letting in subdued light. Lady Blank glancing at the advancing figure, to the astonishment of the visitor, greeted him thus; "Have you a reference from your last place?" The general took in the situation instantly and, with a twinkle in his eye, unobserved by the hostess, answered respectfully, "Yes, my lady." "What were your duties?" was the next query. "Well, my lady, in the last three places 1 held 1 was vice president of the United States, major general in the Confederate army and secretary of war of the Confeder ate States of America."

When Lincoln Had Few Friends. In 1864 Lincoln was of all men the least commended by the Republicans in congress. On one occasion an editor visiting Washington asked Senator Thaddens Stevens to lutroduce him to some members of congress who were favorable to Lincoln's re-election. Ste vens led him to the desk of Mr. Ar nold of Illinols. "There," said he, "i the only Lincoln member of congress that I know!" Stevens himself regard ed Lincoln as incompetent and weak Henry Wilson (afterward vice pres dent) spoke of him as politically a failure. Greeley had a low opinion of his ability. His personal friends, such as Washburn, Raymond and Thurlow Weed, believed his re-election an impossibility. Even Lincoln himself at one time doubted it .- H. T. Peck in Bookman.
