RUSSIA'S POLITICAL BASTILE

Troops Mutiny and Demand The Release of Prisoners From Torture House.

St. Petersburg, Dec. 9.—A serious mutiny has occurred at Sehouseberg, a fortress known as the Russian bastille, which is located on an island in the Neva river, twenty miles east of St. Petersburg. The troops there are demanding the release of all political prisoners and threaten to carry the fortress by assault unless their demands are complied with. This fortress for the past nineteen years has been the torture house of Russia for political offenders. Many of the dungeons are below high water level and the prisoners are half drowned when the tide rises. There are many instances where the prisoners have been driven insane by the torture. The fare of the prisoners consists of bread, raw cabbage and water. The government never grants permission for any one to enter the prison.
