TEMPERANCE EVERY WAY PROFIT

ABLE.

Temperate living has long bee preached from the pulpit, and declare by the moralist writer for the personal physical benefit, and the individual profit as it might keep those so inclined from harmful dissipation.

But in this age, while the educationa movement for temperate living is more strongly proclaimed and advocated, yet there are outside influences which declare the commercial and financial value for those of temperate habits. which are as important factors in helping the cause of temperance, as those which urge temperance on purely physi cal grounds.

A notable instance in this financial value of temperance, is seen in the action of a Swiss life insurance company which offers a premium to those of temperate habits, the members of a temperance society of railroad employes being charged four per cent less premium, than employes who were not members of the organization. A Swiss accident insurance company is also giving total abstainers a reduction of ten per cent in rates, and beginning with 1906, this reduction is to be in creased to fifteen per cent. _

Among railroad people, it has been the aim to take men who were not drinkers or cigarette smokers, and among some leading railroads, men who use either liquor or smoke cigar ettes cannot get or hold their positions on these roads.

In the matter of insurance companies it would seem the only wise policy for every company to make the intemperate pay extra premiums, for it is such | Passenger Agent E. P. Turner of the specially shoul' the intemperate pay extra as members of benevolent or fraternal organizations, where the members are taxed for each death

As each year passes, education showng the value of temperance will prove of great value to the coming race, and as the money value of temperance is better known and appreciated, there will be more demands, that men and women must be temperate in order to secure profitable positions, to say nothing of the value which temperance works for human progress and the upbuilding and advancement of mankind.

oid Howland Really Ever Have One Dolla in This Property?

sheville Citizen It was learned yesterday that Mr. R . Howland now has no interest in the Atlantic and North Carolina railway which the Howland Improvement Company leased from the State several years ago for ninety-nine years. Mr. Howland's interests were sold to Mr. Perry J. Marsden, U. S. Senator Nelson Aldrich and other Rhode Island capitalists connected with the Rhode Island company, which owns practically all the street railways and electric plants in Rhode Island

These facts were developed yesterday when Mr. Howland's representative was asked about a law suit which has been brought by Mr. R. F. Foster against Mr. Howland for damages for reach of contract. Mr. Roster was freight agent of the Southern at Asheville when Mr. Howland leased the oad from Goldsboro to Morehead City and was at once general manager. It is learned that the suit arose out of an alleged breach contract in connection with this employment. Not a great deal of money is involved in the suit, i is said

Mr. Howland is now devoting much time to his property in Cuba.

Gould Steamers to Europe.

New Orleans, Dec. 29.-The recent visit in this city of J. P. Spanier, General European agent for the entire Gould system has given renewed impetus to the story that the Gould's will make either a close alliance with some line operating between New Orleans and Mediterranean ports or operate their own line. The move may have s further significance in view of the early construction of the big government immigration station, - General Texas and Pacific has taken much interest in this project which will assist the road in populating its line from New Orleans to El Paso from among the largely increased number of immigrants who will be sent to New Orleans for general Southern Distrioution. It is said that the Texas and Pacific proposes to make further improvements in its general service with pecial reference to the handling of passenger traffic, industrial enterprises and immigration.

a son by a former wife, who was valid to the Duke of Saxe Weissenfels. Traveling in those days—200 years ago—was tedious and expensive, and Dr. Handel did not desire to be delayed with the care of an "infant" during a journey which the demands of a responsible profession would probably make as short as possible.

But the future giant of music would go. He cried, believed and eventually ran along the road after the vehicle, until the tender feelings of the doctor.

until the tender feelings of the doctor could refuse no longer. In an evil moment for his jurisprudence scheme he took the child with him.

No sooner did the little fellow reach the ducal residence than be gave rein to his fancy on the keys of every instrument that he found open. The remarkable music that came from the fluger tips of the child's hands was soon the object of wonder and conver-sation throughout the palace, and all this was intensified when he secured an opportunity of touching the keys of the chancel organ within the bearing of the duke.

Such a throb started from that chap el organ when little Handel's tendriled fingers chose the keys, and the soul of the duke was touched as it never had been touched before truly a momentous occurrence, since but for it Han del's sacred music might never have been written.

The duke's attention having been arrested, he inquired of Dr. Handel concerning the child's future, and eventually succeeded in placing him for three years' study under Zachau, the organist of Halle cathedral. This was the beginning of Handel's musical education.

The Pink Net.

A curious custom was at one time in vogue at Gloucester, Mass., which the lustrates the sacredness which seems to surround a fish net and the protect tion which the law affords that class of property. Whenever it became neces sary to quarantine a house because of smallpox or other contagious disease the quarantine was effected by stringing nets about the building on the out side. The penalty for disturbing a net was so great that no one dared to meddle with the barrier.
