"MAN WITH THE MUCK RAKE"

President Roosevelt's recent address with the above caption for his subject matter, must be variously interpreted, as the view point may be political, religious, social and even commercial.

From one point of observation it is of interest to look back a few years, to the time when out of Rooseveltism came the word strenosity, which has been synonymous of the President's attitude on every kind of matter from finance to race suicide, and which has developed a strenuousness among Americans, never before so conspicuous, altho the American by tradition among all nations is held as the busiest, most nervous of the human race.

Accepting the metaphor of Bunyan's "man with the muck rake," in its application as the President employs it today, there has been a radical, perhaps fungous growth, s development from conditions of this perhaps, too over excited and much wrought up twentieth century speed, and the demand for results before things are fairly under way. The American people under a public administration surcharged with strenousness, led by a man typical of everything which strenuosity stands for, has quite naturally gone at a pace which has developed much evil along with the good, has created the multi-millionaire class, and with it disorders which are certain to breed in over luxuriousness, and now with the great momentum on, it is sought to check, if not halt the procession, and make people give way to quiet, after being treated to the pace which may not kill, but a pace which habit has made familiar, and which the rapid development in every line of trade, society and customs, seems to still de

If President Roosevelt sees the need for the muck rake, he ought not to be 600,000. over blind to the fact that many of his policies have been provocative, if not promotive of the very abuses which he describes. The President is most often right in his partial deductions, although his rush to reach the conclusion without paving the way calmly, leads to a wrong interpretation of the matter, because the facts have not been quietly worked out, but instead a faulty conclusion sumped at, thus destroying the needed reform, and so the true effort is lost, not because it lacked merit, but through undue haste and exaggeration of socalled facts.

Mohammedans divide th two principal sects-Shish and the Persians representing the bulk of the former, the Turks of the laster. The chief points on which they differ are the condition of the soul afte death and the succession of calipha "The Sunni belief is that there is one immortal God, whose works are with out beginning or end, and that he will be visible to the sonls of the blessed while the Shiahs deny the immortality of the soul and maintain that the en existent principles of Zoroaster will forever contend for the mastery. With regard to the prophet's successors, the Sunnis claim that the lawful successor of Mohammed was Abu Bekr and after him Omar, Osman and All, nephew and son-in-law of Mohammed. The Shishs, however, reject the first three and hold that All was the only legitimate successor. Shighs pray but three times a day and enjoin pil grimages to Nejef, Kerbela, Kazimain, Meshed (Persia), Samara and Kum as well as to Mecca and Medina, Sunnis make pligrimages only to the two latter cities and pray five times a day From this it can be readily understood that the circumstances of the Turks being in possession of the shrines o Nejef (Meshed All), Kazimain and Kerbela is most displeasing to devou Shiahs.-Blackwood's Magazine.
