FORESTALLING HEARST'S PRESI-DENTAL ASPIRATIONS

Nothing is so indicative of the political strength of William R. Hurst, as the present rush to do special honor to William J. Bryan, and notably is this seen in the demograts of Missouri, Arkansas, South Dakota and Indiana deciaring for Mr. Bryan's nomination for trates in New Bern Monday to assist in making the tax levy for 1906. New York is to be made a conspicuous event, by a great reception, with a welcome of greeting by Governor Folk of Missouri, and a big gathering of Even the once time political party foes of the Nebraskan, are declaring for him, and the word is passed along the line to forward the Bryan movement for his nomination for the presidency. On July 3rd at Greensboro, N. C., no doubt the politicians will introduce resolution favorable to W. J. Bryan, and this movement successfully introduced and carried out in the various democratic State Conventions, means the easy nomination of Mr. Bryan for presidency, and overshadows all would be aspirants for the honor.

Is all this haste to welcome and then confer unsought and unasked the presidential nomination upon Mr. Bryan, a burst of feeling, prompted only by the excessive political worth and personal regard for the Nebraskan ? From what quarter comes this hurried desire to force a nomination, except it be fear by the politicians that some other candidate may loom up, a possible candidate who might prove unacceptable to the leaders of the democratic party? In plain words would there be this present political pressure exerted for Mr. Bryan, if William R. Hearst was not the report of Messrs. Neill and Reylikely to prove a factor as a candidate for national honors at the hands of the nocratic party?

Just what is likely to develop, no one can predict, but if the present tender of honors to William Jennings Bryan, is not meant to forestall any presidential aspirations of William R. Hearst, then no further political guesses need be made.

A POTTERY TOWN.

Chingicehen In Unlike Any Other For at least 900 years the town Chingtechen in China, has been devoted to the making of pottery. Every-thing in Chingtechen belongs to the porcelain and earthenware industry. The houses are for the most part built of fragments either of old kilns or of the fire clay covers in which the porce-lain is stacked during firing. The riv-er bank is for miles covered with a deep stratum of broken chinaware and chips of fire clay, and the greater part of the town and several square miles of the town and several square miles of the surrounding country are built over or composed of a similar deposit. Chingtechen is unlike anything else in China. The forms, the color, the materials used in the buildings, the atmosphere, are reminiscent of the poorer parts of a civilised industrial center. There are 104 large pottery kilns in the town. The greater part are in use only for a short season in the summer only for a short season in the summer. During this busy season the population of Chingtechen rises to about 400,000 souls, but of this total nearly half are laborers drawn from a wide area of in rows of barracklike sheds and do not bring their families with them.

Visitors to Chingtechen pass along street after street where every shop is occupied by men, women and children, alliengaged in the designing, molding, painting or distributing of pottery. The river bank is crowded for three miles by junks either landing material and fuel or shipping the finished product.

Maund and Maunder.

Neither mound, a basket, nor maunder, to white or grumble, is obsolete. Both are still in common use in South Notis and Leicestershire, at any rate. The former is used only, however, of a particular kind of basket, used for carrying butter to market. The basket is nearly square in shape and has two lids opening from the middle part, where the handle is, and it is called the "butter mawn" (maund). Maunder is usually heard in such sentences as "What are you maundering at." A Northumbrian will say, "He's a maundering old fool," when the man of whom he is speaking strings words together in a senselves nort of way some wint akin to maudding.—London Notes and Queries.
