OFFICIAL PAPER OF NEW BERN AND CRAVEN COUNTY.
New Bern, N. C., January 16, 1907.

SAVE THE LITTLE FISHES!

It takes an actual knowledge and experience with the situation in Eastern Carolina to fully appreciate the destruction of fish that is going on each year. In the local columns of the Journal a few days ago, was told the story of some twenty tons of edible fish, brought to this market and sold for a paltry fifty dollars. These same fish, if left to mature, naturally, in a year or two would have sold for fifteen hundred dollars.

This is an illustration of the destruction of the fish that is taking place. It is the story of how both fish dealer and fisherman, alike, thinking only of today, killing the goose that would always lay the golden egg, and thus depriving themselves of all future gains.

The waters of Eastern North Carolina offer the finest possibilities for fish revenue of any state on the coast. It is not that the fishermen and dealers of this section are only interested. Every citizen from Piedmont to the western boundaries of the State should take a personal interest in this fish preservation. It is a source of revenue that might prove, and would prove of immense value to the State, if carefully guarded. As it is today, it gives no returns worth mentioning.

In further evidence of the falling away of the fish catch in East Carolina waters, every winter during the best of the fishing season, fishermen from North Carolina go to the Florida coast and from there catch and ship fish to this State. With proper safeguards, the waters of this State would furnish all the fish needed for State consumption, with a big surplus for outside markets.

There have been governors reports, and legislative committees appointed, that have sought to remedy the evil. They have done some good, but the real evil is the small fish net. The fisherman with the large mesh net, complains of the fisherman with the next smaller mesh, and so on down. Each seeks a smaller mesh, until today rivers and sounds are filled with fine mesh nets that give the little fish no chance to escape, and tons of fish are scooped up to be thrown on fields, that should have been given the chance to grow to maturity, and become of marketable value. What is demanded is the abolition of every kind of net that has a mesh which serves to scoop up every small fish. If no mesh was smaller than one and one-half inches, it would serve to protect tons of edible fish, that are now caught and serve only for fertilizer. Save the little fishes, that is the legislation needed. For if these are not saved, there will soon be no little fishes to save, and a great possible industry, a rich sea food product worth hundreds of thousands of dollars, annually, will disappear.

The practical solution, is to get down to the cause of the destruction, which is the small net, and removing this, give the fish the natural opportunity, to grow, increase, multiply, and enrich North Carolina and her people.

Beavers of Otterheads for Catfish That Contains Mercury
As mercury will surely destroy the sense of smell and completely derange the whole system when entering it through the mucous surfaces. Such articles should never be used except on prescriptions from reputable physicians, as the damage they will do is too told to the good you can possibly derive from them. Hall's Catfish Cure manufactured by F. J. Cheney & Co., Toledo, O., contains no mercury, and is taken internally, acting directly upon the blood and mucous surfaces of the system. It is pleasant to look on the rain when it stands dry - Dutch.

DANDELION
a safe and sure specific for rheumatism.

Rheumatism for the most part attacks the sinews and muscles of the body. Therefore the joints, the muscle casings and heart valves suffer most. Like gout this disease is caused by an excess of uric acid or blood poison in the system. Rheumatic pains sometimes change their location; wander from one part of the body to another, and visit joints in succession. The nature of this painful disease is still a matter of opinion, but certain remedies have been discovered that produce immediate and lasting relief, and many times a permanent cure. Probably the most important discovery made in this connection is the famous prescription from which Dr. Edwards' Compound Dandelion Tablets are prepared. Thousands of people have used this wonderful remedy for rheumatism and are now well and happy. It will pay you to get a box today.

President Roosevelt has an account at the Riggs National bank in Washington. The bookkeepers have no end of trouble keeping the president's balance straight, because so many people who get checks from the president fall to cash them, preferring to preserve the checks as souvenirs. So many persons are willing to pay from $1 to $10 for an uncashed check signed by the president that hundreds of dollars are saved by him every year.

Ever since 1840 the skull of Sir Thomas Moore has been on show in a museum at New York. It has ever been restored to the vault whence it was taken. Sylvanus Urban in the Gentleman's Magazine condemns this morbidness and that of certain people who proposed to have Shakespeare's skull similarly examined. "Let such ghoulishly inclined busybodies," he says emphatically, "confine their attention to the anatomy of Jonathan Wild."

Winston Churchill, who triumphant ly carried through the parliament just adjourned the bill for a constitution for the Transvaal, has been given the sobriquet of the "Bismarck pup" and for several reasons. One is the fact that he is a Churchill, descendant of the great Duke of Marlborough who humbled the pride of the French at Blenheim. Another is the bulldog fashion in which he fights his political battles. His face is said also to have a bulldog look. He won his victory for South African autonomy as under secretary for the colonies, a position that does not give him a seat in the cabinet.

Miss Flammarion, the distinguished wife of her equally distinguished husband astronomer, never allows any one to cut her husband's hair but herself, and she uses the short locks for pillows. Her home in Paris is full of such pillows stuffed with clippings. Telescopes, heliometers, sextants, astrolabes and other astronomical instruments are scattered all over the room among them. The Flammarions were married thirty years ago. Therefore, taking the average time of man's growth of hair between each cutting as three weeks, the treasured accumulation of over 500 hair cuttings must make a gooey pile.

THE CURSE OF INDIA
CASTE, WHICH FIXES THE STATUS OF EVERY HINDOO.

No Man Can Rise From the Class, However Unclean, in Which He Was Born - Neither Wealth Nor Success Affects the Caste of Any One.

In the fixed scale of descent in India some classes are merely inferior, while some are "unclean" or "untouchable," but from whatever class a man be born in he has no escape but death. Children born in an "unclean" caste remain "unclean"; children born in an inferior caste remain as their fathers were. Nothing that they can do can in the slightest degree change their situation. They were born "unclean," their ancestors were "unclean," their descendants will be "unclean" till the end of the chapter.

To give a few illustrations from many, a weaver is less "unclean" than a carpenter, a carpenter is above a house cleaner, a house cleaner is above a street cleaner, and a street cleaner is above a pedlar or a no caste man. Every trade or occupation has its exact place, arbitrarily fixed, in the scale of degradation.

Above all the men that labor with their hands in whatever way are the tradesmen and shopkeepers, also with subdivisions into classes; above the tradesmen is the useless and now almost idle warrior class; above the warriors is the Brahman or priestly class, and with these grand divisions the structure of the system is complete.

Health or material situation of success has nothing to do with the caste of any man. You may hire for your cook or valet a Brahman of the purest strain serene, who for weeks before he engaged him may have been on the verge of starvation. The meager beggar to whom you toss a coin in the road may be of a very high caste. The well fed groom, resplendent in gorgeous livery, flashing by on a carriage that covers the beggar with dust, is very likely of a caste a little below the beggar. Time no more than effort can break down these walls of division. One of the wealthiest and most distinguished families in Calcutta, the famous Tagore family, lost caste about two centuries ago. Members of this family have received honor from the government, have conferred great benefits upon city and country and have been noted for their numerous charities and benefactions. One exerted himself all his life to further native education. Another helped to endow Calcutta university. All are enormously rich, and all bear enviable reputations for goodness, honesty and philanthropy. But the wall of caste has never fallen for them. They are still hated and avoided by their countrymen exactly as they were at the beginning of their exclusion. In the streets of Calcutta is many a ragged artisan that would not sit on the same bench with a Tagore or touch the end of his robe.

Pain, suffering, penury, even death itself, is nothing to the Hindoo compared with the loss of caste. Many a Hindoo that in the old days would fly nothing to the most fendish tortures quickly surrendered his secrets when threatened with something that would contaminate him - a piece of cowskin, perhaps, or a glass of water that had been touched by a pariah. In fact, thousands of cases persons that have hopelessly lost their caste have abandoned their homes and wandered miserably along the roads until death overtook them. Thousands of others have thrown themselves into the Ganges or deliberately starved.

Three Brahman girls who had been degraded by a Mussulman went before a judge to demand vengeance and when the judge declined to interfere killed themselves in the courtroom.
A town called Buj Buj a widow lost caste by falling in love with a man beneath her. As a loss of caste by one member of the family degrades the other also, her eldest son immediately swallowed poison and died, and his remaining brethren fled the country.
A husband shares a wife's degradation. A wife goes down the steps with a husband. For more than 100 years a Brahman family of Santipur has been degraded because one member fell in love with the daughter of a shakma. - Charles Edward Russell in Cosmopolitan Magazine.

Procrastination.
Here is a curious couplet which illustrates in one sentence the various values of the combination "ough" and shows how strikingly inconsequent are the spelling and pronunciation of some English words. The lines may be supposed to be the words of an invalid who had a strong will and was determined to live in spite of his ailment:
Though the night cough and hiccough
Hounded me through,
Yet o'er life's lough my course I will pursue.
A Nurse of Recitance.

Cured of Long Trouble.

Enjoying as I did the beneficial effects, have been heartily recommending Rheumacide to others, as I know it is a boon to humanity, and I wish you success in your efforts to disseminate the knowledge of its merits from the painful affliction.
