DOCTORS TREAT YOUNG CHILDREN

Surgical Operations and Medicine Will Make Them Honest Citizens.

New York, 4 Feb.—Medical science, the court and the city authorities in New York have joined in an effort to arrest or eradicate criminal tendencies in the young. An announcement of a definite plan was made yesterday as the result of a conference between President John D. Lindsay of the New York Society for the Prevention of Cruelty to Children, Justice Desel of the Cornell university medical school.

Mrs. W. K. Vanderbilt, Sr., is one of the patrons of the project which aims to decrease the number of defective children by affecting cures that criminal tendencies will not be imparted to posterity. Surgery will be employed for minor afflictions with the consent of the parents and the presiding officer of the Children's court.

"It should be understood that surgical work is a detail of the plan," Dr. Schlapp said last night. "Medicine rather than surgery, and healthful surroundings while the patient is under treatment, will be depended upon to effect cures. The consent of all concerned being secured, a patient suffering from growth in the nose which obstruct proper breathing, enlarged or inflamed glands in the throat, or minor ailments that often are the results of inherited taints, will be recommended for surgical treatment."

Records brought to the Children's court whose delinquency is attributed to physical causes will be examined by experts.

The number of cases called for such operations will probably not be large Justice Desel said. Dr. Schlapp's investigations, which led to the present plan, disclosed that hereditary blood taints which can be remedied often bring a child into the court when the child is not otherwise responsible.

Indispensable.—There are some simple remedies indispensable in every family. Among these, the experience of years assures us, should be recorded Perry Davis' Painkiller. For both internal and external application we have found it of great value; especially can we recommend it for colds, rheumatism, or fresh wounds.—Christian E. a.

Trade Report

Richmond Va. Feb. 3 1910—Bradstreet's Saturday will say for Richmond and vicinity.

Trade conditions generally are in a satisfactory condition, however, the agitation of high prices for staple commodities of food products is having its effect. Produce is quiet, the fruit and apple market is not as strong as previously reported. Manufacturers of trunks, bags and similar commodities are working at capacity and orders for future shipment are liberal. Shoes and dry goods are fairly active. Selling operations are in excess of a comparative period of last year. Lumber manufacturers report an active demand for practically all lines. Tobacco manufacturers have had an unusually good year and sales and prices for leaf and the manufactured products indicate continued activity. Naval stores are firm. Drugs are active. Retail trade and collections are fair. Railroad reports show few idle cars, and increased freight receipts.

Extremes should exercise care in an envelope, wrap them in a piece of paper, or deposit them in a coin-holding receptacle, so they can be easily and quickly taken from the boxes, and carriers will be required to lift each coin, and when accompanied by mail for dispatch, attach the requisite stamps.

SHORT PASSING EVENTS

black horse, hitched to a dray, turned the corner at Davis' Pharmacy. A small colored boy, presumably an amateur marathon runner, was racing along by the animal's side trying to stop his mad flight but his efforts proved to be futile as he was soon outdistanced and left behind. The animal was soon stopped and no damage done.

A Journal representative was yesterday shown over the scene of the Norfolk and Southern fire which occurred several weeks ago, by one of the local managers. Practically all of the debris of the conflagration have been removed and the whole scene presents a vast contrast to what it did a few days after the ravages of the flames. The large force of workmen employed by the company to attend to the repairing of the cars were busily engaged in their work and were presumably making as much headway as when they were offered the shelter of the various buildings that were destroyed.

From an item published in a Toledo, O. paper it was learned that J. N. H. Smithwick, a prosperous farmer of Beaufort county, was perplexing the physicians of that city by a prolonged sleep. Smithwick went to Toledo some time ago to meet a young lady whose acquaintance he had formed through the columns of a matrimonial paper. After having been in the city several days he was found in his room at a hotel in an unconscious condition, and for the past sixteen days has remained in a comatose state, having to be fed through a tube. Many physicians, both local and foreign, have examined him but have all failed to find the cause of his long sleep.

A trick was played on a farmer who came to the city yesterday to dispose of some of his farm produce, by one of the local "perambulating thieves" that is no good to keep. After depositing his produce he carried his conveyance to one of the livery stables where he intended to leave it while he satisfied his appetite. While he was unloading his team he was approached by a dusky individual who informed him that for the small consideration of 75 cents he could secure a plot of "the goods."

Being rather thirsty the farmer passed over the required amount of coin and the colored man went off in search of the liquor. In a short time he returned, and after surveying the lay of the land, steadily passed over a pint bottle filled with a beautiful amber colored liquid, and at once departed. Stepping behind his vehicle the farmer raised the bottle to his lips and took a long draught of "the goods" which he divided with his team. He remained in the city the whole afternoon in hopes of locating the perpetrator of the job but failed to find him.

FIREMAN WRECKS HIS ENGINE

Girl He Loved On One Track. Trolley On Another.

New York, Feb. 4.—Frederick Mayer fireman, driver of the truck of Engine Company No. 141, was lying at the point of death in the Norwegian Hospital, Brooklyn, at midnight, after performing a deed of splendid heroism while driving to a fire at No. 271 Fifty-fifth street. The engine house is at Sixty-ninth street and Third avenue, Brooklyn, and to get to the fire Mayer drove along Third avenue under the structure of the elevated railroad. His horses were on a full run when at Fifty sixth Mayer saw directly in his path a young girl standing, apparently so overcome with fright that she had not strength to get out of the way. Close to her and on the other track stood a trolley car filled with passengers.

If he kept on he would run over the girl, if he turned he would run into the trolley car and perhaps injure the passengers. Mayer saw all that in the twinkling of an eye and instantly made up his mind what to do. He yelled to the firemen clustered along the sides of the truck to jump, gave the reins a mighty tug and ran full tilt into one of the iron pillars of the elevated railway.

There was a terrific crash, the horses were thrown down badly injured, the truck was overturned and Mayer was pinned down under it, his skull fractured, his left leg broken and his body bruised and crushed pitifully. He had gone to almost certain death without the slightest hesitation to save the lives of others.

Ambulances were summoned from the Norwegian Hospital and when the doctors arrived they found that Mayer was unconscious and very near to death. They hurried him to the hospital and then attended to the other firemen who had been hurt in jumping from the truck. Their injuries were not of so serious a nature as to warrant their removal to the hospital, however.

The fire in Fifty-fifth street was a trifling affair and was soon extinguished by the firemen of other companies.
