New Bern, N. C. March 13, 1910 THE PRESS AND THE PUL PIT.

The action of the Durham ministry in deciding to omit all church notices from the Sunday newspapers, is a local decision, and while outsiders may question the wisdom of this course, the Durham paper has nothing to lose. In most cities the church notice in local newspapers is of great help to the traveling public, who at hotel or boarding house are not acquainted with the location of churches, and on Sunday morning the newspaper church notice often secures an attendant at divine service, who otherwise would not go, except for the prompting that the church notice gave.

The vast amount of news matter that must be spublished by the daily press, much of it on subjects not pleasant to read, yet necessary if the newspaper is to be a faithful chronicle of daily happenings, this cannot be urged against the press as violating moral principles. Crime Ing, blind or protruding piles send without indecent details, the exposure of corruption; the pointing out of needed reforms, these are the province of the press, and society is ment free, for trial, with references strengthened as these are successfully handled, and the republic is given greater moral help. Crime and corruption fear the law less, than the publicity, for without the latter the former would have less corrective effect. And so without the press, the pulpit today would prove far less an influence in the general moral uplift of man. And vet the press makes no boast that it practically works hand in glove with the church in every moral uplift movement. The principles of the press, as a whole, are for good morals. That here and there finds the exception, proves the rule. When a newspaper fails in its morals, community sentiment will be against it to its business undo-

The recent Laymen's movement proves the close kinship between pulpit and press for the moral uplift, for the press gave daily its columns to assist in every way, what was spoken from the pulpit and so gave impetus and strength SPECIAL TERM OF to the movement.
