A reason for a complaint does not by any means prove its justification, or is it a warrant that the complaint has been properly supported by the reason. There may be a cause for complaint ample and just, which might excuse the complaint being made.

In periods when extreme climatic or atmospheric conditions prevail, crops may suffer severely and physical trouble may come to human beings. The press for weeks has told of persons committing suicide, giving as the reason for their suicidal acts, Halley's comet. This is a reason, but the actual cause for the complaint, is unbalanced mentality.

Good fortune, prosperity, good health, provoke no reasons to explain their coming. The cause of their coming can usually be easily traced. Failure provokes complaint and every complainer can give a multitude of reasons, and perhaps not be able to attribute one just cause for the complaint that the failure prompted. ### ANNOUNCE MENTS To the Democratic Voters of Craven County.

Here's the Proof

For two or three years my hair had been failing out and getting quite thin, until the top of my head was entirely baid. About four months age I commenced using Gage and Sulphur. The first bottle seemed to do some good and I kept using it regularly, until now I have used four bottles. The whole top of my head is now fairly covered with hair and it keeps coming in thicker. I shall keep on using it a while longer, as I notice a constant improvement.
