MATERIAL FARM PROSPERI TY OF THIS SECTION.

From its correspondents in this ction, the Journal gains in its summary of farming conditions, that never before has the situation of it effects and concerns the farm-ing communities been in so proes a state as it is this January

In the matter of debts, there are few farmers who owe, or who if they do owe, are in any way bur-dened. In farm or home supplies there has been a grad amount of hog meat put up. For the house hold fruits and vegetables are can ned or stored, and for all product marketed, the highest prices were obtained. Poultry and eggs are sold about as quickly as was the cotton, and in every way had there been a material farm gain. This present state of prosperity is caus ing a trend towards better farm ing, in better preparation and more intelligent farming. The small farm with more intensive work, is being recognized as, the wise plan, as against the diffusive work that a large farm is certain to produce.

What the Journal wants to see, and be able to show in some future statement, is that the educational advancement in the same sections is making the same progress as the material. There is educational progress but a good deal more is needed along practical every day lines, that will assist in the material farm work and make that of a better and more profitable kind.

The couples in waiting were Mr. Clem Brinson, brother of the bride, and Miss Eva Pipkin a nice of the bride, and Mr. Harry Rawls and Miss Cassie Bennett. They marched to the time of "Mondelahan's wedding march" which was rendered by Miss Annie Pipkins of Atlantic Christian College, and elso a nices of the bride. After the cere mony was over the bridal party and a few invited friends retired to the home of the bride, and partook of a bountiful wedding feast," after which the bride and groom departed for their future home at Janeiro.
