Blotted Out "Lord Penn." The first book of any kind publish ed in Philadelphia was Atkin's Almanack for the year 1080, it was a unpaged pamphlet of ten leaves, only two copies of which are now known two copies of which are now known to be in existence. The first copy of the Almanack printed was sent to Colonei Markham, Penn's deputy, who reported to the council that the book had erroneously declared Pennsylvanis to have been founded by "Lord Penn." The council disapproved such a high sounding title and directed the author and printer (William Bradford) to "forthwith and effectually blott out ye words "Lord Penn." This had the effect of recalling the whole edition and the abolition of the shourious words.

Examination in Flogging-Quoting from "Student Life In the Middle Ages," a paper recently read by C. D. Burns of Bradford, England. we learn that in the taking up of a degree in grammar at some of the universities the prospective schoolmaster had to provide himself with a birch and a boy, and as part of his examination he had to administer a examination he had to administer a flogging to the boy in public, the boy being given a groat for his services. A large part of the education lay in debate between the boys, under the supervision of the master, the method bringing out the boys' reasoning powers instead of merely cramming them with facts, as is too often the method today.—University Correspondent.
