COLOR BLINDNESS.

The incident that opened John Dalton's eyes to his affliction. John Dalton, the famous English chemist and natural philosopher, with whose discovery of the laws of chemical combination chemistry as an exact science would hardly exist, was nearly color blind. His knowledge of the fact came about by a happening of the sort which we call chance. On his birth-day, when he was a man of twenty-six, he took her a pair of stockings which he had seen in a shop window, labeled "Silk, the newest fashion."

"The lady bought me a pair of gray ones," said the mother, "but what made them fancy such a bright color? Why, I can never show myself at meeting in them."

John was much disconcerted, but he told her that he considered the stockings to be of a very proper color to meet color, as they were a dark bluish drab.

"Why, they're as red as a cherry, John," was her astonished reply.

Neither he nor his brother Jonathan could see anything but drab in the stockings, and they rested in the belief that the good wife's eyes were out of order until she, having consulted various neighbors, returned with the verdict, "Yarra, fine stuff, but uncommon scarlet."

The consequence was that John Dalton became the first to direct the attention of the scientific world to the subject of color blindness.

THE DRINK CALLED COFFEE.

Here is the way they made it in the Seventeenth Century.

There are in existence in Great Britain a few copies of an ancient cookbook, published in 1602, that gives what is perhaps the first English recipe for coffee. The recipe reads:

"To make the drink that is now much used, called coffee.

"The coffee berries are to be bought at any Druggist, about seven shillings the pound. Take what quantity you please, and over a charcoal fire, in an old frying pan, keep them always stirring until they be quite black, and when you crack one with your teeth that it is black within as it is without, set it off; and if less, then will it not deliver its Oyl, and if you should continue to stir it, he will it will then make no coffee, but only give you its salt. Bent and force through a lawn sieve.

"Take clear water and boil one-third of it away, and it is fit for use. Take one quart of this prepared water, put in it one ounce of your prepared coffee and boil it gently one hour, and it is fit for your use; drink one-quarter of a pint as hot as you can sip it. It doth abate the fury and sharpness of the Acrimony, which is the gender of the Diseases, called Cronical."

Beat the Bank's System.

The boy entered the Cleveland bank and laid a half dollar with his bank book on the receiving teller's window. "We don't receive deposits of less than a dollar," said the teller. The boy yielded reluctantly to the system and drew back. But he did not leave the bank. He crossed the corridor and seated himself on a bench. The teller noticed him sitting there and also noticed the reflective look on his face. The boy waited for some time, "thinking it over. Finally he arose and went to the paying teller's window. A moment later he confronted the receiving teller. "I want to deposit this dollar and a half," he said. The teller grinned. The boy had just drawn a dollar from his little balance and was using it as an entering wedge for the rejected half dollar. And so the system was beaten by the boy, and a considerable accession of bookkeeping labor was the price of defeat.—Cleveland Plain Dealer.

The Stone Army.

Mr. P. H. Elfreed tells in "Yankee for England" the story of the Roll-right Stone, a stone circle in Oxfordshire, which were said once upon a time to have been a king and his army and were converted into stone by a witch who cast a fatal spell upon them by the words:

"Have ye stone; stand fast, stone; King of England, thou shalt be stone."

The military stone is the ambulatory monarch who was told by an oracle that if he could see Long Compton he would be king of England; the circle is his army, and the five "whispering angels" are five of his subjects, who were hurrying a pit against him when the magic spell was uttered.

Our First Free School.

The first free school established in the United States was in the province of Massachusetts Bay in the year 1641 by order of the general colonial court. In 1647 the same authority declared that free schools should be established within every town having fifty householders under penalty of a fine of $5. This law was doubled by a declaration made in 1671 and again doubled in 1683.

A Pretty Compliment.

His incessant work, his avoidance of all rest and recreation and his rigorous self denial made Joseph Pulitzer in his days in harness the despair of his family.

In this connection a pretty story is told about the famous journalist's son Ralph. Mr. Pulitzer had refused to take a holiday, and Mrs. Pulitzer exclaimed:

"Did you ever know your father to do anything because it was pleasant?"

"Yes, once—when he married me," the young man gratefully replied.—Washington Post.

The True Shout He Wanted.

"I wanted to shout 'Hallelujah'."

"I don't know what you wanted, but I don't think you should have done that."

"I don't know what you wanted, but I don't think you should have done that."
