DRESDEN CHINA.

Its Three Periods and the Marks the Pieces Bear.

Dresden china began its reign at the fair of Leipzig, 1771, where it was offered for public sale for the first time. It has had three periods—King's, Marcoline and modern.

The factory marks traced on the bottom of each piece vary according to the period—the oldest (King's) being the monogram A. R. and the wand of Aesculapius. The familiar crossed swords, with the dot or circle between the handles, were first used in 1820, and the star took the place of the dot in the Marcoline period. The modern mark is the simple crossed swords, sometimes accompanied by letters and numbers.

Although the methods of work are still jealously guarded in all factories, the essentials are an open secret, and the following rough outline may satisfy the lazy curious: The ingredients of porcelain are kaolin feldspar, sand and selate. These are ground fine and mixed in lime water. The paste is then molded into forms and fired in an oven of moderate heat. When taken out it is in an opaque state and is then dipped in the glaze, which is feldspar ground fine, with a little alkali. It is now subjected to a firing of great heat, which results in the beautiful polished surface so familiar the world over.

This second firing is attended with risk, for if the piece is allowed to remain beyond the exact proper moment the whole melts together and is ruined.

The Light Was There.

A well known New York clubman was found by a police officer very late one night in a piteous state of intoxication. The wretched fellow stood beneath a lamppost, which he was kicking with might and main.

Slightly amused, the policeman watched him a moment. Then he said: "Here, sir, what are you doing there?"

No reply. Only—bang, bang, bang—the tipsy one dealt the lamppost three more kicks.

"What are you doing?" repeated the policeman.

The man delivered another quick volley of very furious kicks, and then looking up, he said:

"Oh, I know she's in all right—'cause there's—hic—a light upstairs."

Sheep are put to double use in the northern part of India. In the Himalayas. They are driven from market to market with the wool still growing, and in each village the owner shears as much wool as he can sell there and loads the sheared sheep with the grain he receives in exchange. After his flock has been sheared he turns it homeward, each animal carrying a bag of grain.

The Handy Heater

PERFECTION
SMOKELESS OIL HEATER

You often need some heat in early Fall, when you have not yet started the furnace.

In whatever part of the house you want it, you can get it best and quickest with a Perfection Smokeless Oil Heater.

The Perfection is the most reliable heater on the market, and you can move it wherever you please.

Start it in bedroom or bathroom, and you dress in comfort on the coldest morning. Take it to the dining-room, and early breakfast becomes a pleasant, cozy meal. A touch of a match at dusk, and all is snug for the evening.

The Perfection Smokeless Oil Heater is beautifully finished—an ornament anywhere. Drums of plain steel or enameled in blue; nickel trimmings. A special automatic device makes smoking impossible. Burner body cannot become clogged. All parts easily cleaned. Dampers top. Cool handle. Dealers everywhere; or write for descriptive circular to any agency of the

He was in the mountains on the advice of five doctors, who said he had consumption, but found no help in the climate, and started home. Hearing of Dr. King's New Discovery, I began to use it. Origin of the Four Poster.

In medieval times, when life was very insecure, it was usual for people to sleep on a bed which was surrounded by sides of boards with strong posts at the four corners. These sides contained sliding doors, which could be fastened inside. When men retired to rest they took a weapon with them. If attacked in the night they were wroused by the noise made by the crashing in of their wooden defense and were able to defend themselves. When the law became strong enough to protect human life the sides of the bedstead were gradually dispensed with, but the four posts remained. The boxlike bedstead still survives in the rural parts of Scotland and is almost necessary where the earthquake floors and imperfect ceilings cause much damp. Emily Bronte in "Wuthering Heights" describes one of the bedsteads in the old mansions as forming a "little closet." Mr. Lockwood, who had to sleep in it, says, "I slid back the panel sides, got in with my light, pulled them together again and felt secure."

He Legged Superfluous.

Pittsfield, in the Berkshire hills, had in the old days, like many another New England town, a number of men and women who were called "characters." One of these was Bill Brown, a man unfortunately addicted to drink and frequently intoxicated for days at a time.

On one occasion he went into the shop of the local hatter, Mr. Smith, and asked for the best beaver in the store. Mr. Smith produced the desired article, saying as he took the money, "That beaver will last a man's life time."

Bill went proudly down the main street with his long beaver on his head and immediately celebrated the event with a profuse laugh.

When he recovered he returned to the shop with a most dejected air. "Look here, I thought you said this here beaver would last for a lifetime," he said, "I've worn it for a week, and it's all gone!"

"If you had seen what you ought to see," said Mr. Smith, "you'd know it was a good beaver."

Queer Newspaper Names.

The Italians are naturally an imaginative race, and the titles which they give to their newspapers, especially in the provinces, fully confirm the fact. Here are some instances of the curiosities:

At Anpi, in Piedmont, there is Il Bollicino (the boiling one); at Gerace, the Circus of Nero; at Messina, the Lightning; at Lucera, the Second Lightning; at Monreale, the Indeflexible; at Catania, the New Mariouettes.

Immorous publications rejoice in even stranger titles. We have the Contropelo (shave against the grain) at Naples, the Two of Spades at Turin, the Ship in the Face at Bologna, the Pic Pat at Palermo, the Brush at Cattanduetta and the Mosquito at Savigliano.
