

THE PEELISH CHILD NEEDS TREATMENT

When a child sulks drowsily, or is fretful, it is usually due to some slight disorder of the digestive organs and a mild laxative is very often all that is necessary to restore cheerfulness and buoyancy of spirits.

In cases where the use of a gentle, effective laxative stimulant is indicated, many of the best physicians are now prescribing Dr. Caldwell's Syrup Pepsin. This preparation is admitted by the perfect laxative, being mild yet positive in its action on the bowels, and far preferable to violent cathartics and purgative waters. It is very pleasant to the taste and is an ideal remedy to regulate and strengthen the stomach, liver and bowels. Its easy, natural action makes it especially desirable in the case of children, a dose at bed-time being sure to have the desired result next morning, with no attendant unpleasantness or discomfort.

Dr. Caldwell's Syrup Pepsin is sold by druggists everywhere in 50c and $1.00 bottles. If you have never tried this splendid remedy, write to Dr. W. B. Caldwell, 201 Washington St., Monticello, Ill., for a sample. He will be very glad to send a trial bottle without any expense to you whatever.

See Value in Open-Air Schools.
During the year 1911 the greatest percentage of increase among the different forms of anti-tuberculosis work was among the open-air schools for anemic and tuberculous children. On January 1, 1911, there were only 29 open-air schools in operation or provided for in the entire country. On January 1, 1912, there were 91, an increase of 214 per cent. Sixty-two new schools have been established or provided for this past year. This entire number of open-air schools have been established since January 1, 1907.

He Thought He Was Safe

He was taken one night to a little affair where each guest must make fun with a story. So he thought to make plain to the gathering that at tale-telling he could win glory. He was fond of a daisy, whose father was a host. An irascible, gouty old Colonel—So he chose for the story to please them the most. A short joke from the Ladies Home Journal.

You're aware, I've no doubt, of the page that he read. For each month when the Journal comes, find me. With a wink of my eye and a wag of my head—Looking over the page, "That Reminds Me!"

Well, our anxious young friend learned the story by heart. With all his memory's courage he found it. He was sure "would be heard as a rare piece of art. When he thought of the place where he found it.

So he picked up his form and began with the tale. And they gave him the deepest of thanks. While the men in their nervousness grew very pale—And the ladies could not hide their smiles. But he stammered right through till he came to the end. Though his soul was sufficed with a wonder.

If his memory might have proved not all his front. And had caused him to make a wild blunder. Then the Colonel, for father, rose up to his wrath. And taking perhaps three or four steps. With the young man's limp form cleared a path straight through the door. Ere he found him straightway from the doorsteps. Then he chased him away to the end of the street. And exclaimed "Am no regions out and out."

And the young man now vows he will never repeat. Any tale from the Ladies Home Journal.

ANSWERS FOR THE ANXIOUS.
Lily: "It is not good form for you to precede your effort in going down the aisle of a theater. When you do that it gives the audience the impression that you have paid for the seats."

Curious: "The half of a dollar bill which you read, asking if it is genuine, has a good appearance. Send the other half, and perhaps you will get the desired answer. It is easier to spend the whole bill at once."

Old Reader: "No, it would not injure a sailor if he sat down on the starboard tack."

Arabella: "If the young man threatens to kill himself if you do not accept him, and your papa is the only undertaker in the town, and is also the coroner, you should certainly give the matter serious thought before deciding what to do. It is difficult for an outsider to decide between love and duty."

Why is it?
"This is a marvelous age," muses the man with the introspective eye, and another just as good. "We have progressed until we have a wireless telegraph, the wireless train, the wireless home, the wireless telephone and the wireless match."

"Rockefeller must be a great believer in reciprocity."
"Why so?"
"Why, whenever he gives away a million or so he advances the price of oil."

The Thin Girl's Temper.
"No thin woman can afford to lose her temper. 'Nothing,' says a good authority, 'will make you so angular or give your face such an unattractive look as the free indulgence of your own will.' A girl who was thin to a really painful degree gained 25 pounds in 60 days on the following regime: Twelve hours' sleep a day, a well-ventilated and cool room to sleep in, with plenty of fresh air all night, light down covers for warmth and hot water bags at the feet if they are cold, loose light clothing at all times, with plenty of space about the chest, shoulders and waist, a diet of cereals, cocoa, fresh fruits or starch vegetables, potatoes, beans, etc., milk and cream, everything of a warming, fat-producing nature in the way of food, warm baths, though not too frequently."

The Curse.
"Max, you had free love, and may say all merry for love!" London Opinion.
"Ever notice how much easier it is to go from bad to worse than from good to better?"

One Subject for Which Body of Women Readily Abandoned Other Topics of Conversation.
Elizabeth Jordan, who has just finished a play, the second act of which is told in a beauty parlor, was told by a young man, who was sitting next her, that she was beautiful.

where there were fifteen or twenty other women guests. When we went to the drawing room after dinner, leaving the men to their cigars, it happened that all the women but myself and one other got into one corner of the room, and I and one fellow guest were left alone. "I've forgotten why, but that's the way it was." "We were talking of a subject in which we were both interested, and she called out, from the other side of the room: "Why, Miss Jordan, what are you and Mrs. Hank talking about all by yourselves?" "Mrs. Hank is telling me how she lost ten pounds," I replied. "Well, you ought to have seen the center rack. Every woman in the room made a wild dash for it. The eyes of every woman were all slightly watering. And from every woman's face there came a look of intense interest."

possibly. "Do you know?" says the young man with the ingrowing chin and the overdone ears, "ever so many girls have asked me for my photograph. Really, I don't know but I should feel flattered. Why do you suppose they want it?" "It is simple," says the young woman with the firm mouth and the keen eyes. "They want to send a complimentary card that will be out of the ordinary."
