By Common Garden Sage, a Simple Remedy for Dandruff, Falling, Faded, Gray Hair.

The old idea of using sage for darkening the hair is again coming in vogue. rs used to have dark, glossy hair at the age of seventy-five while our mothers have white hair before they are fifty. Our grandmothers used to make a "aage tea" and apply it to as possible from the cold he lies with their hair. The tea made their hair the building shell fluoremost. In this soft and glossy, and gradually restored the natural color.

One objection to using such a preparation was the trouble of making it, sepecially as it had to be made every two or three days, on account of souring quickly. This objection has been overcome, and by asking almost any first-class druggist for Wyeth's Hage and Halphur Hair Remedy the public can get a superior preparation of sage, with the admixture of sulphur, another valuable remedy for hair and scalp troubles. Daily use of this preparation will not only quickly restore the color of the hair, but will also stop the hair from failing out and make it grow.

his mouth after the manner of a nursery dragon. "I don't know whether I am acting wisely or not, but under your promise to divulge nothing you may learn from me without my consent I am going to risk it. I know that you believe in your cousin Bruce's honesty.'

"Implicity." "But do you happen to know that he has somehow or other managed to come into active control of enough money to resume his operations on change on a rather liberal scale?" he queried with a thin smile. I was astonished and told him so. "Well, he has," he pursued assert ively. "Furthermore, he is carrying on his operations under some name which does not sound at all like his own. You look surprised. That's the way I felt when I first found this

I ruminated. "But certainly he would not be fool enough to openly and notoriously and under our very noses begin the use of money dishonestly obtained almost the day after the commission of a crime which he knows he has not absolved himself of?" I cried. LeDuc looked at me queerly.

"That is what almost any one would think under first impulse. But when you are dealing with criminals you must remember that they do not reason and act just as do honest men. When a sane man takes his life and liberty in his hand and commits a desperate crime, he is of necessity more or less regardless of consequences, as well as being driven by strong pressure. And in nearly all cases it is because of this recklessness that we catch him. He may commit the crime itself with a skill and caution that is almost more than human, yet the next day is apt to go it instantly attracts attention to him. For instance, having had no money before, he now begins to spend it lavishly; or becoming under the influence of liquor boast or let things drop that sound queer. If it were not for these peculiarities of the criminal make up, and the fact that he generally makes a confident of some woman who betrays him, the road of the criminal would be comparatively safe and that of the detective an unbappy

"But I cannot believe that there is anything crooked about Bruce. Deceit is foreign to his whole nature." My friend thrust one hand in his pocket. "Does he ever smoke cigarettes?" he smiled.

"Frequently."

"Any particular brand?" I paused to reflect. 'I think so. As I remember, those that I have seen were invariably a Turkish abomination with a serrated gilt band for a hand from beneath the table and tossed a half-smoked specimen of the species which I had been describing HOW COLD AFFECTS THE KID on the table before me. I looked at him incuiriagly. "I found that in the ballway of your uncle had been confined. Perhaps you noticed at the time that I picked up something which I did not show you.' Stiently I sat trying to read his blank eyes. But as for divining what lay behind them I might as well have gazed at windows back of which the shades were drawn.
