"Jos! Oh, Jos!" Carrington gianced in the direction of the keel boat and an instant later saw Slosson clamber over its side. The tayers keeper crossed to the cabin, where he was met by Bess, who placed in his hands what seemed to be a wooden bowl. With this he slouched off to one of the outbuildings, which he entered. Ten or miteen minutes slipped by, then he came from the shed and after securing the door, returned to the cabin. He was again met by Bess, who relieved him of the bowl; they exchanged a few words and Slosson walked away and afterward disappeared over the side of the keel boat.

This much was clear to the Kentuckian: food had been taken to some one in the shed—to Betty and the boy!-more likely to George.

He waited now for the night to come and to him the sun seemed fixed in the heavens. At Belle Plain Tom Ware was watching it with a shuddering sense of the swiftness of its flight. But at last the tops of the tall trees obscured it; it sank quickly then and blazed a ball of fire beyond the Arkansas coast, while its dying glory spread asiant the heavens, turning the fignks of the gray clouds to violet and purple and gold.

With the first approach of darkness Carrington made his way to the shed. Hidden in the shadow he paused to listen, and fancied he heard difficult breathing from within. The door creaked hideously on its wooden hinges when he pushed it open, but as it swung back the last remnant of the day's light-showed him some dark object lying prone on the dirt floor. He reached down and his hand rested on a man's booted foot,

"George—" Carrington spoke softly, but the man on the floor gave no sign that he heard, and Carrington's questioning touch stealing higher he found ly to arouse him.

"George?" he repeated, still bend- of as prose. - Washington Herald. ing above him. This time an inarticulate murmur answered him. At the same instant the woolly head of the negro came under his fingers and he discovered the reason of his silence. He was as securely gagged as he was

"Listen, George-it's Carrington-I am going to take off this gag, but don't speak above a whisper—they gust, her elder sister and her girl may hear us!" And he cut the that held the gag in place.

"How yo' get here, Mas'r Ca'ington?" asked the negro guardedly, as the gag fell away. "Around the head of the bayou."

"Lawd!" exclaimed George, in a tone of wonder.

"Where's Miss Betty?" "She's in the cabin youder-fo' the tove of God, cut these here other ropes with yo' knife, Mas'r Ca'ington -I'm perishin' with 'em!" Carrington did as he asked, and groaning, George sat erect: "I'm like I was gone to sleep all over," he said.

Practice With Wooden Legs. Of the five cases in the accident ward that were pronounced cured at the same time three remained in the hospital more than a week after the other two had gone home.

"They 'ad to stay," said an interne "to get used to their wooden legs. It takes some time to learn to manage wooden legs, and most men who wil have to peg along with them for the rest of their natural lives stay in the hospital several days after they ge well to practice stumping around on their new legs. Of course they can learn outside, but the man who has just acquired a wooden leg feels so awk ward and is so likely to fall down and break the other leg or an arm or maybe his neck that we prefer to keep him here so be can take his first lessons under our supervision." - New
