Easy Way to Preserve Natural Color of the Hair and Make It Grow.

A harmless remedy, made from common garden sage, quickly restores gray hair to natural color. The care of the hair, to prevent it from losing its color and lustre, is just as important as to care for teeth to keep them from discoloring. Why spend money for cosmetics and creams to improve the complexion, and yet neglect your hair, when gray hair is even more conspicuous and suggestive of age than wrinkles or a poor complexion? Of the two, it is easier to preserve the natural color and beauty of the hair than it is to have of the hair than it is to have a good complexion.

All that is necessary is the occasional use of Wyeth's Sage and Sulphur Hair Remedy, a preparation of common gar-den Sage and Sulphur, combined with other valuable remedies for dry, harsh, faded hair, dandruff, itching scalp and falling hair. After a few applications D. Rockefeller gives his testimosheriff of Craven county, subject to of this simple, harmless remedy, your ny, it will be seen how little was the will of the people to be expressed natural color, in a short time the dandruff will be removed, and your hair will no longer come out but will start to grow as Nature intended it should.

Don't neglect your hair, for it goes further than anything else to make or mar your good looks. You can buy corporation. Above the Trap-Doors. The next day he saw her at the opera. She was still wearing the plain gold ring. She was gentle and kind to him. She talked to him of the plans which he was forming, of his future, of his career. He told her that the date of the Polar expedition had been put forward and that he would leave France in three weeks, or a month at least. She suggested, almost gaily, that he must look upon the voyage with delight, as a stage toward his coming fame. And when he replied that fame without love was no attraction in his eyes, she treated him as a child whose sorrows were only short-lived.

"How can you speak so lightly of such serious things?" he asked. "Perhaps we shall never see each other again! I may die during that expedi-

there is no question of that And we shall never be married; that is understood!"

She seemed suddenly almost unable to contain an overpowering galety. She clapped her hands with childish glee. Raoul stared at her in amazement.

"But . . . but." she continued. holding out her two hands to Raoul, or rather giving them to him as though she had suddenly resolved to make him a present of them, "but it we cannot be married, we can we can be engaged! Nobody will know

She was enchanted with her inspiration. Then she became serious again. "Thid," she said, "is a happiness that will harm no one." Raoul jumped at the idea He bowed to Christine and said: "Mademoiselle, I have the honor to children that they were. Oh, the wonderful speeches they made to each other and the eternal rows they exchanged! They played at hearts an other children might play at ball; only, as it was really their two hearts that they sung to and fro, they had to be very, very handy to eatch them, each time, without hurting them.

One day, about a week after the game began, Raoul's heart was badly hurt and he stopped playing and uttered these wild words: "I shan'l go to the North Pole!"

news as that with such stupefying calmness. He tried to sound her, but the old lady obviously knew nothing. Christine returned on the following day. . She returned in triumph. She renewed her extraordinary success of the gala performance. Since the adventure of the "toad." Carlotta had not been able to appear on the stage The terror of a fresh "co-ack" filled her heart and deprived her of all her power of singing; and the theater that had witnessed her incomprehensible disgrace had become odious to her. She contrived to cancel her contract. Dase was offered the vacant place for the time. She received thunders of applause in the Juive. The viscount, who, of course, was present, was the only one to suffer on hearing the thousand echoes of this fresh triumph; for Christine still wore her plain gold ring. A distant voice whispered in the young man's

She said: "Quick! Quick! . . . Come!" And she dragged him to her dressing-room.

Raoul at once threw himself on his knees before her. He swore to her that he would go and he entreated her never again to withhold a single hour of the ideal happiness which she had promised him. She let her tears flow. They kissed like a despairing brother and sister who have been
