

A HOOD MEDICINE WITHOUT ALCOHOL

Recently it has been definitely proven by experiments on animals that alcohol lowers the peroxidation power of the body and that alcohol paralyzes the white corpuscles of the blood and renders them unable to take up and destroy disease germs. Disease germs cause the death of over one-half of the human race.

A blood medicine, made entirely without alcohol, which is a pure glyceric extract of roots, such as Bloodroot, Queen's root, Golden Seal root, Mandarin and Stone root, has been extensively sold by druggists for the past forty years as Dr. Pierce's Golden Medical Discovery. The refreshing influence of this extract is like Nature's influence—the blood is bathed in the tonic which gives life to the blood—the vital fires of the body burn brighter and their increased activity consumes the toxic rubbish which has accumulated during the winter.

Dr. R. V. Pierce, the founder of the Inevitable Hotel and Surgical Institute, and a physician of large experience and practice, was the first to make up an ALTERNATIVE EXTRACT of roots, without a particle of alcohol or narcotic.

"It is with the greatest pleasure that I write to let you know of the great benefit I received from the use of your medicine, and especially from the use of your Pleasant Pellets. I suffered for three years from a running sore. Consulted four doctors but they failed to heal or give relief. Finally I was told I was in consumption and would have to consult a specialist concerning my cure, that the dead bone must be cut out before the wound would heal. A kind friend advised me to write to Dr. Pierce, which I did, and after seven months took the Golden Medical Discovery, and I enjoy better health than I ever did. I dressed the wound with Dr. Pierce's All-Healing Salve and took the Golden Medical Discovery and Pleasant Pellets for my troubles. I shall always recommend your medicine."

The Wayfarer

By Collin S. Collins

(Copyright, 1911, by Associated Literary Press.)

Cecily was born for romance. She hated anything that smacked of the commonplace. Hence when she saw Bruce Esmond, for the first time, she believed herself madly in love with him.

Bruce was an artist with a leaning toward illustration. He set up his easel one April day on the edge of a newly plowed field, and proceeded to make a sketch of Cecily's father.

Mr. Drake resented not only the impertinence of having himself put in a picture—but in being put in one when he was not dressed in his Sunday best. So he told Bruce Esmond to go elsewhere for his inspiration. Then Cecily interfered.

"Why, father, he paints such lovely things," she said, "just look at those horses."

Drake grudgingly admitted that Remus and Romulus looked well, and compromised on a sketch in which he should be left out.

"You can put in the field and the sky and the horses," he stated generously, "but not me."

Then he went on plowing and Cecily and Bruce Esmond proceeded to get acquainted.

Bruce said the conventional things—that Cecily was too pretty to be buried in the country, that he was tired of city women with their feathers and furbelows, that Cecily rested him and pleased him—all the fascinating compliments that men of his class use to turn the heads of the unsophisticated.

Thus, Cecily believed herself madly in love with him and if it had not been for the Wayfarer she would either have married Bruce to live unhappily ever after, or she would have felt herself broken-hearted.

The Wayfarer came slouching along the road in old clothes, with a fishing creel slung over his shoulder and a rod in his hand. He did not compliment Cecily at all. He simply asked for a glass of water and sat on the stone bench and drank it. He looked very tired and Cecily invited him in. "When father comes home we'll have supper," she said, "and he's always glad to have company."

"What Have You to Say About It?"

The Wayfarer thanked her and, for the first time, he smiled.

Cecily liked his smile. It lighted up his tired face, and seemed to warm the observer.

Cecily sat by him on the stone bench and chatted of many things. She talked most of Bruce Esmond. "You've heard of him, of course?"

"Yes. He has a promising career before him."

"Oh, I hope so," said Cecily, ardently.

The Wayfarer said nothing.

"How long has he been here?" he asked, at last.

"A month," said happy Cecily, "and he's going to stay another month. He wants to get the light of the May moon on the apple blossoms."

"Humph!" said the Wayfarer.

Mr. Drake was very enthusiastic about the Wayfarer that night.

"He wants to board here through the fishing season," said the farmer to Cecily. "I don't know but we might as well let him."

"Of course," said Cecily. But when she told Esmond, he raged.

"How can I have any inspiration with him around? I want only you, Cecily."

"But you see father needs the money," said Cecily, gravely. "There's the interest on the mortgages to be met."

Esmond looked at her keenly. "I thought your father owned the farm," he said.

"He does. But there's one mortgage. And times are bad and the crops have failed."

Two weeks later, the Wayfarer, coming up from the stream, stopped behind Esmond's easel. "There are just two things you should try to do," he said, quietly; "you shouldn't try to paint sunlight on that silver pool, or to make love to a girl like Cecily." Esmond turned an angry face up

HA, O JOHN, WHAT IS THE TROUBLE NOW?

Why haven't you heard the latest? They brought old man economy down last night in an automobile and he is telling some strange stories. He was hung up on the fence for weeks watching the sheep feeding in the pastures, watching the wool grow, watching the shears clipping it off and went to the factory and watched every process until he was able to purchase the best line of foreign and domestic wools that has ever been his good fortune to do, and his correct fall fashions are now ready, prices lower than the lowest. He is again stopping with.

John M. Callahan's Story.

John M. Callahan told a story of a friend who had been asked to make a short address on the tariff in Manitowoc.

"It was eight o'clock when he began his speech, and he slowly unfolded the intricacies of the wool schedule, the steel rate and a few others, never noticing the time. At 11:30 he hesitated for a few moments, and said: 'I have made my remarks rather short, and perhaps some of you do not fully understand this important subject and wish to ask me a few questions. I will be glad to answer anything you may ask me.'

"For some minutes none spoke, and again he asked for questions. Finally an old Irishman in the rear of the hall arose.

"And wud yer be ather tallin' me something?" he asked.

"Surely," said my friend, "what is it you want to know?"

"Well," said he, "if ye don't mind, what time is it?"—Milwaukee Free Press.
