Stranded

By VERNON ARNOLD

Ned Franklin was the son of a man who had graduated as a platoon leader, drifted east and made money. Ned went west to see what his father had seen. He had been gone just two weeks when his father received the following telegram from him:

Stranded. Telegraph money for return. When he got home he told them of his week's adventures in the land of the spurs, the revolver and the rifle. It was as follows:

He found Denver, which his father had known as a small town, a large city and pushed on westward. When he came to the end of the rails he took coaches. He was now in the land where travelers talked about road agents, where those in the towns spoke incidentally of the last gun fight, or how much money had been won or lost by some prominent citizen at Faro. Ned, who believed the only way to learn the manners and customs of a people was to make their acquaintance, told everybody that he had come out to see the country and meant to see it thoroughly. He had no stuck up notions about him; not he. He felt as much at home with a stage driver as he would with the veriest dandy at home. The consequence of this behavior was that he made friends in a trice.

One evening at the Antelope—a tavern, gin mill and gambling house combined—it was suggested by a man who was showing Ned the town, that he invest a few dollars at Faro. Just to see how it worked. Ned looked at his friend, smiled, slapped him on the back, winked and said:

"Not much. I'm a young man from the city, and you can't come Faro on me."

"You're dead right, pard," said the other, "but what I meant was to invest $2 to see the game, just as you'd spend the same for a round of drinks."

The man left Ned, but after a while returned and asked if he proposed to go west in the stage the next morning. Ned said he did; whereupon his friend asked if he would mind taking charge of a young lady. Ned remarked that he would be only too happy to do so. He was seeing a good deal of the men of the country, but had thus far met few of the women. He was assured that the young lady, Miss Iver, was the daughter of a wealthy ranchman, and had been to Denver on a shopping tour and was returning to her home. This pleased Ned very much, and he anticipated a bit of a flirtation with Miss Iver. How it would surprise his father if he should marry a ranchman's daughter and turn ranchman himself.

Ned was introduced to Miss Iver at the coach door by the man who had asked him to escort her and was somewhat disappointed in her. Her walk was awkward, and her voice was not refined. However, she was a woman of the country, and he was curious to learn all about her. He asked her if she wouldn't like to sit outside, but she declined on the ground that the sun freckled her, so they entered the coach, Ned taking a seat beside her.

The young woman was disposed to be quiet and uncommunicative during the early part of the journey, but as one by one the passengers left the coach, she thawed and took pleasure in giving her escort information about the country, occasionally pointing out objects of interest. Ned, warming up, began to pay her compliments as he had been used to paying them to girls at home, but she was not used to them, or did not seem to know how to take them; but she evidently was trying to make it appear that she had been paid compliments before.

She told Ned that she expected her father to meet her at the junction of the stage road and another leading to the ranch. When the coach reached the junction Ned expected to see a four mule team and a four seated country wagon. But he saw nothing. Not there did the young lady. She looked very much troubled. Ned asked her what she would do. She said she supposed she would have to wait. For a young woman to wait at a crossroads with no house within miles seemed to Ned little short of madness. The stagecoach must go on, and Ned tried to persuade his fair charge to go on too. But she said her papa would be awfully wroth when he arrived and did not find her.

There was nothing for Ned to do, especially since she had been placed in his charge, but to remain with her. She declined to permit him to make the sacrifice unless he would promise to spend his time till the coach passed the next day at her father's ranch. In deed, she declared that papa would not hear of his doing anything else.

So they staid, and the coach went on. As soon as it turned a bend in the road and was out of sight, Miss Iver took a revolver out of a pocket in her dress and, covering Ned, said:

"Young fellow, if you've got any valuables in your clothes, shell 'em out."

When Ned recovered from his surprise he accented the situation. The lady threw off her feminine apparel and stood before him a man with his trousers in his boots. He took $800 Ned handed him and said:

"Now, you galoot, move on."

Ned walked back ten miles to a relay, where the driver of the returning coach took him aboard and carried him to a telegraph station.

IN NEW BERN

The Evidence Is Supplied by Local Testimony

If the reader wants stronger proof than the following statement and experience of a resident of New Bern what can be?

Mrs. Layema Hall, 30 George st., New Bern, N. C., says: "Doan's Kidney Pills have been of great value in restoring my health. I suffered from a weak back and pains across my kidneys that made me restless at night. In the morning I felt tired and had no strength or energy. The secretions from my kidneys were unnatural and raised me no end of annoyance. When I read about Doan's Kidney Pills, I got a supply from the Bradburn Drug Co. and they removed my pains and aches, since taking this remedy, I have had better appetite and my entire system has been toned up." (Statement given January 25, 1908.)

A LASTING EFFECT.

When Mrs. Hall was interviewed, short time ago she said: "I take pleasure in confirming my former endorsement of Doan's Kidney Pills. They gave me permanent relief from kidney trouble and during the past several years, I have enjoyed good health."

APPLICATION FOR PARDON OF BURRILL CASEY AND LEONA CASEY.

Application will be made to the Governor of North Carolina for the pardon of Burrill Casey and Leona Casey convicted at the October term, 1911 of the Superior Court of Craven County of the crime of murder in the second degree and sentenced to the penitentiary for a term of ten years.

The defendants claim the right to pardon for the following reasons:

It is charged that the crime charged, that is murder by poisoning, they should have been sent to the electric chair, but the solicitor for the State and the Private Prosecutor asked the Judge for verdict for murder in the second degree and not guilty in the first degree.

Upon this the jury found verdict of guilty of murder in second degree and recommended the mercy of the Court.

Upon this verdict the Judge of the Court pronounced a sentence for imprisonment in the Penitentiary for ten years while he might have made it thirty years.

All this shows the prosecuting attorneys, the Judge and the jury did not believe that the defendants were guilty of the crime of which they were charged.

The petitioners claim their pardon each of them each for himself on the ground of absolute innocence.

STORY OF THE SEXTANT.

A Chance Observation That Gave Godfrey a Great Idea.

The element of chance plays an important role in invention and in no case is this more strikingly illustrated than in that of Thomas Godfrey, the American who improved upon the quadrant, or, rather, devised the sextant, the basic notion for which he got by noting the reflection of the sun from a pane of water.

Godfrey was a glazier by trade, but he had a taste for mathematics and was a man of some culture.

John Hadley had also invented a sextant, apparently a development of a suggestion of Newton's, found among his papers at his death. Godfrey anticipated Hadley by about one year, but for a long time his claims were not recognized. Hadley receiving the entire credit.

The glazier thus received his inspiration for the instrument that was to prove of such value to mariners. One day, while replacing a pane of glass in a window of a house in Philadelphia opposite a pump, he saw a girl, after filling her pail, put it upon the sidewalk. The observant glazier saw the sun reflected from the window on which he had been at work into the bucket of water. His mind quickly perceived the significance of the situation, and he was thus led to the design of an instrument "for drawing the sun down to the horizon," a device incomparably superior to any that had hitherto been used for the ascertainment of angular measurements.—Harper's Weekly.

Keeping a Secret.
