New York, April 17 .-- J. P. Morgan's Panking house.

The document is in the possession of Lewis Cass Ledyard, an old friend and adviser of Mr. Morgan.

"Mr. Morgan was broad-minded, public-spirited and generous in life," said a close friend of the late financier today dicsussing the possible disnohis ideals in his will."

The inference drawn from the remark is that Mr. Morgan has left his superb art collection to the city of New York.

Aside from this bequest there is growing bel ef that Mr. Morgan has left but little to any one outside his immediate family. No great amounts it is believed, have been willed to char-

"So far as he was personally concerned," said this friend, "one might almost say that money was a mere incident to Mr. Morgan. He never hoarded money. He was a prodigious spender. He summoned special trains as the average man calls a taxicab He poured out money indulging his artistic tastes. He gave freely to all worthy causes. In short, he was not prone to count the cost

"Another peculiar trait was the Shabit he had of paying for things but once a year in order to avoid the bother of monthly payments. The persons with whom he dealt knew of this habit and charged him more than others but he was willing in order to save the bother of monthly settlements.

"These were the traits which made the cost of living for him so tremendous.

"Do not get the idea," continued this informant, "that Mr. Morgan died a poor man. He left probably $50,000-, 000 outside of his art tressurers. But the never was a tremendously rich man as fortunes are estimated these days.

"It was not his own money but his transcendant power to concentrate the money of others which enabled him to do the big things he did."

Another fact current in Wall Street soday will surprise most persons. Mr. Morgan probably dominated more railgood companies and industrial corportions than any other man in the world yet it is declared his stockholdings will be found to be very meagre because he hald it to be the best policy to keep his captial in liquid form and ready for instant use.

The bulk of his fortune, Wall Stree men declare, will be found to be in bank deposits, call loans and other ready-at-hand sources.

Into Infidelity, Says Returned Missionary.

DR. BRYAN AT FIRST BAPTIST

Declares Missionary Enterprise Is Now Well Established Present Critical Time.

Basing his opinion on an experience that now was the accepted time for

The congregation sang the famous missionary hymn, "The Morning Light is Breaking", and in beginning his remarks at its close Dr. Bryan said that he felt that it was about time to revise that hymn for he felt that China at least was beyond the dawn and that instead of the hour of dawn it was with China now something like seven o'lock in the morning, and he hoped and believed t would not be long before the full day with all its brightness would have come.

He explained that it was impossible for him to speak in any great detail of experience undergone in twentyseven years of life in China. So he said he would confine his remarks to the single topic of "The Decay of Idolatry in China", speaking largely out of his own experience. Going back to a time sixty years ago when a great Chinese swept the South of China with a movement that resulted in the destruction of millions of gods and then coming up to thirteen years ago when the Boxer Rebellion substantially altered the conditions of North China, he described the loss of faith on the part of the Chinese in their gods and gave numerous and striking incidents showing that the pople of that formerly idolatrous country had now come to look with contempt and amusement on

Dr. Bryan said that now that the idols were overthrown it was of the first-importance that Christ be given the Chinese else there was danger that they would sink into a condition of atheism and infidelity from which it would be harder to raise them than it has been to shake their belief in idols. Now is the accepted time, he declared for converting the Chinese. There are many young people he said who are willing to throw themselves into the work, the great need being for those who stay at home to put themselves-their time and their money

-into the enterprise. This is an age of much doubting, Dr. Bryan said. But he brought a message in which there was no trace of doubt. "Doubts never made a big man," he said. "The apostle Paul never fed on doubt. He fed on faith and Paul was a big man."

Dr. Bryan wil speak again Sunday night and this afternoon at 4 o'clock Mrs. Bryan will be tendered a reception by the ladies of the two Baptist churches of the city and will make an address. The ladies of all denominations are invited.
