

Gave Up Hope

"I suffered five years, with awful pains, due to womanly troubles," writes Mrs. M. D. McPherson, from Chadbourn, N. C. "They grew worse, till I would often faint. I could not walk at all, and I had an awful hurting in my side; also a headache and a backache. I gave up and thought I would die, but my husband urged me to try Cardui, so, I began, and the first bottle helped me. By the time the third bottle was used, I could do all my work. All the people around here said I would die, but Cardui relieved me."

HUMOR OF A SCULPTOR.

Carpeaux In His Merry Moods With Napoleon III.

Although he was a man of great earnestness and seriousness of purpose, Carpeaux, one of the most famous French sculptors of the last century, had a droll tongue and a capricious humor that he vented on lucky and emperor alike. Lecture Pour Tous relates some amusing anecdotes of him.

At a reception at the Tuileries Napoleon III, engaged in a few minutes' private conversation with Carpeaux. At its conclusion the young sculptor was besieged by a crowd of courtiers and envious rivals, who wanted to know what the emperor had talked about.

"Promise to tell no one!" whispered Carpeaux as he drew the eager listeners to one side of the ballroom. "Well, then, the emperor was trying to borrow 5 francs from me."

Some years later, when Carpeaux had received the commission to do the decorations for the Pavillon de Flore of the Tuileries, Napoleon often came to watch him at work on the scaffold that had been built against the face of the building. Occasionally the emperor mounted aloft to this improvised studio, hung between earth and sky.

One day Carpeaux, in a particularly merry mood, told him that when he wished to rest from his labors he would make tiny pellets of clay and drop them on the heads of passersby.

"It's very amusing," he explained. "People stop and look about them. They can't imagine where the missiles come from."

"Here," he continued, holding out some of the little clay bullets; "try it yourself."

"I wouldn't dare," laughingly said Napoleon, amused at the idea of the emperor of the French, mounted on a scaffold, throwing pellets of clay at his subjects.

"Bah!" muttered Carpeaux. "What's the use of being an emperor?"

Napoleon did not forget this remark. A few months later, when the sculptor sought a title, the emperor, unable or unwilling to grant the request, exclaimed:

"Bah! What's the use of being Carpeaux? Isn't that better than baron?"

MENACE OF THE CURTAIN.

Window Draperies and the Campaign Against the White Plague.

If the worldwide campaign against tuberculosis is going to be a success it cannot be too strongly impressed that, like charity, preventive measures must begin at home. Fresh air must be obtained by each occupant of every room in the house. This can never be accomplished until housewives realize that the body is of more value than miment and an abundant supply of pure air of more importance to life than the maintenance of the traditional snow whiteness of a pair of window curtains.

The fear of soiling white curtains and also of admitting dust and dirt into the rooms where it can settle on furniture and ornaments is quite as much responsible for the closed window habit as is the dislike of drafts. It is hard to overcome prejudice and harder still to root out an old established custom, but nevertheless the sanitary facts of hygiene should be taught plainly and simply to elder girls in school so that wise habits of home maintenance may be inculcated.

The abbeil curtains altogether from the windows of private dwellings would be, perhaps, too much to expect of the present generation, but if this ideal cannot yet be attained they might be made of some less expensive or more readily washable material. For the sake of appearances human lives must not be allowed to suffer. London Medical Press and Circular.

Feeling Heat and Cold.

That physical objects that we feel objects that are cold when brought in contact with the skin quicker than those that are warm is that the skin, being a very poor conductor of heat, absorbs heat slowly from an object of a higher temperature than itself, while other objects which are cooling and which is a very common instance.

better conductors of heat than the skin absorb heat readily from the skin, and hence a sensation of cold is felt at once.

Sizing Up the Situation.

The young girl had been engaged as an amanuensis by a society woman. She discovered that nearly every day the husband and wife had a quarrel, so she gave notice that she was going to leave.

"Why?" inquired the lady, in surprise.

"Oh, you don't need an amanuensis, madam," replied the girl. "What you want is a war correspondent!"—Yonkers Statesman.

LEGENDS OF THE SWORD.

Curious Beliefs That Hovered Round the Ancient Weapon.

Countless legends and superstitions have attached to the sword since the days when fighting was the principal occupation of life. So highly was the sword esteemed that Mohammed in the Koran declared it to be "the key to heaven and hell."

The warrior or knight gave a name to his sword. He vowed at the altar never to draw it in a false cause. It was his companion and friend and descended from father to son for many generations. One sword named "Brother of the Lightning" had a golden hilt inscribed with magic words. In times of peace these were said to be illegible, but before a battle "they glowed red as blood."

It was believed, moreover, that a sword after long use acquired a life of its own. Many famous swords were said to utter cries before battle, and after a weapon had killed five score men it became blood hungry and leaped from its scabbard at the approach of a foe. Certain swords were said to refuse to give a wound in a bad cause. Among these was the brand Excalbur, which was given to King Arthur by a fairy and which Richard Coeur de Lion professed to own.

In the east superstitious reverence is still paid to the sword. The Daimios of Japan, when they voluntarily surrendered their rank, kept as a rule the wonderful blades which had been handed down from generation to generation, in some cases for more than a thousand years, and which had absorbed, as they believed, some of the character and life of the men that had owned them.—Harper's Weekly.

SARDINIAN BAGPIPES.

So Exhausting That Nearly All Who Played Them Died Young.

Bagpipes are the Bulgarian national instrument. Until lately the servants who waited on the Turkish grand vizier in Constantinople were mutes, though not, as in former times, persons specially mutilated, but children born deaf and dumb. They used a language of signs, with a special gesture to describe the representative of each nation. To indicate the Bulgarian agent they imitated a man playing on the bagpipes. It is said that the Bulgarians who invented the pipes, however, they are among the oldest of musical instruments.

The bagpipes were not only a part of the book of Daniel are believed to have been bagpipes.

It was with these pipes that the nearly all the pipers died young. In 1845 George Bushell came across one who had survived to the age of eighty. But he was the last of the Sardinian pipers, and when he died the instrument was played no more.—Chicago News.

Business, ill-managed was on the verge of ruin. The engineer left his engine one day and stepped in as superintendent. Never had seen the inside of a printing plant.
