

Mourn.

Mourn not for them that mourn For sin's keen arrow, with its rankling smart...

Genius and Laziness.

About as foolish a notion as can lodge itself in the head of a young man is the idea that he is a genius...

The example of Sheridan, who united in himself the endowments of three extraordinary men, being a wit, a dramatist and an orator...

Sheridan was a genius, and he was lazy. His indolence, however, together with his dissipated and prodigal habits...

Even these appearances were due to hard work, to which he was spurred by the necessities of the occasion...

The greatest speech of his life was that which he delivered in the House of Commons, against Warren Hastings...

Logan, one of Hastings' defenders, said to a friend, after Sheridan had spoken for an hour...

'Mr. Hastings has acted very unjustifiably,' was his confession, at the end of the third hour.

The fourth hour drew from him the indignant assertion, 'Mr. Hastings is a most atrocious criminal!'

The orator went on, and just as he was concluding—he spoke five and a half hours—Logan exclaimed, 'Of all monsters, the most enormous is Warren Hastings!'

It is not strange that Pitt, at the conclusion of the speech, moved an adjournment to give the House time 'to collect its reason.'

Our Country Suspicious.

The country people of England are suspicious of what they do not fully understand. An amusing illustration of this habit was given to the rector of a parish in Sussex...

His parishioners were kind enough to make him a handsome present, the sum being made up by subscription. Some time afterwards, he was surprised and amused to learn that a current criticism said it was 'a curious thing that our parson couldn't get married without sending the hat round for money to pay his wedding expenses.'

The parson, being a wise man, deduced from the criticism an additional argument for the utmost publicity in all money matters in which he and the parish were both interested.

'Ah, ma'am,' said an incredulous cottager to a lady, a district visitor, 'my son has been up to the North Pole; he tells me some things that I really can't believe, though he is my son. He tells me, ma'am, that he has seen with his own eyes 'ice bugs' as big as a church.'

The story may recall one which went floating through the papers some thirty years ago. An old woman, who united credulity and incredulity in her habits of thought, had a sailor 'ad'.

'Well, mother,' said the graceless rogue, knowing the old lady's habit of mind, 'we once anchored in the Red Sea. The next day, on hauling up the anchor, we found it unusually heavy. Judge of our surprise, when we got it above water, to see hanging from one of the flukes one of Pharaoh's chariot wheels.'

There, I can believe that, my son, for the Bible tells us all about that wicked king being drowned in the Red Sea, but don't tell your mother any lies about flying fish, for she won't believe a word of it.

A more singular instance of perversity in belief was that related of Dr. Johnson, who, when informed of the awful Lisbon earthquake, pook-pooked at it as absurd but he firmly believed in the Cock-lane ghost story.

But Dr. Johnson, for a man of learning, was remarkably superstitious; and it is a peculiarity of such people to disbelieve the causes of ordinary natural phenomena, while they have no hesitation in giving credence to the wildest stories of a supernatural character.

It is for this reason, in a great measure, that what is called 'Spiritualism' has developed so largely in modern times. Its believers are mostly among people of limited education.
