The Man Meeting at Trenton.

We learn from one who was present that the meeting at Trenton yesterday was unusually large. Speeches were made by Col. L. W. Humphrey, J. E. O'Hara, Taylor of Edgecombe, Wassom of Goldsboro, L. J. Moore Esq., Capt. E. IR. Page, E. R. Dudley and Robt.

The meeting was presided over by Capt. Page. He made the closing speech favoring O'Hara after the following resolution was unanimously passed:

Resolved, That we, the Republicans of Jones'county, in mass meeting assembled, do ratify and endorse the Hon. Jas. E. O'Bara for a seat in the 48th Congress of the U. S., and do pledge him our carnest and active support in the election.

Messrs. Dudley and Hancock spoke in favor of Hon. O. Hubbs, but our informant states that there was not a dissenting voice to the above resolution.

On Thursday night, the 23d of July, 1822, at half past twelve o'clock, departed this life, Mr. Johnsthan Price, after a short but not a painful illness.

When a man who has rendered eminent services to his country, and who by his virtues has endeared himself to a prominent bias of his mind, the strongnumerous acquaintance, takes of them his last, his ever lasting farewell, it seems to be not improper to take some little notice of his past life, that posterity may be enabled to do justice to his memory, and to profit by his example. And that the life of Mr. Price has been a great public, as well as private benefit, in the way of his profession, no one will deny. Although no body is ignorant of the existence of Price's Map of the State of North Carolina, it is believed that neither the public utility and vast was very little typographical knowledge in the country, and to undertake and completely effect the actual survey of ing over its whole surface, up and down its numberless roads, laying down with precision, the situation of the State with with respect to each other-tracing the course of the rivers from their sources The town of Kinston-its youth and to the sea-delineating the mountains, upon the map, the distances of places All this, I say required a degree of intellect that determines the possessor

His survey of the coast of North Carolina, on which he was employed by the State, is well known and highly approved for its accuracy and is another proof of his mathematical skill, his last employment by the State, was for the purpose of taking the level of several of cers will meet in Kinston, on the 9th of the counties, ascertaining the degree of September next. those who have sin ought not to cast them. In a word, how seldom appears such a man upon the stage of life—perhaps not once in an age. It is not thought extravagant to say, that on many accounts, Carolina never saw his equal. Like the immortal Franklin, he was self taught, and like him too, the was self taught, and like him too, the est trait in his character, was philan-thropy, or an unbounded love of the whole human race. He was, in the words of the prince of Poets one of "the noblest works of God," for he was truly and emphatically not only in practice but in principle—"An honest man.,' Agisilous, King of Sparta, being asked what ought children to learn" replied

"that which they ought to practice when they become men." The men living in the generation just before and with Jonathan Price, in Newbern, kept their children constantly reminded, both with the word of God, and of the advice of the Spartan Monarch; and we find in 1882, our town filled with young men of extraordinary talent and merit were of good size and very smooth. in all kinds of occupations and professions. The writer of this has heard Dr. F. L. Hawks relate with no little merriment, that he has known his father to take his brothers and himself Monday morning, before starting to school and remark, "it will arouse you and keep on you." Price was of the Hawks school-not looking to the wishes of the boy but to the success of the man. We may in this calightened day object to such teaching, yet it must be admitted that when the Elder Hawks died he left around him young men whose abil ity, learning, morality and perseverance would have given them high positions in any country or age.

But a writer says, and is it not the truth, "whichever be your route to understand the world the conclusion will be the same. Its joys lie in a little compass, and one the opportunity of all. What is exceptional in your career is quite as apt to bring pain as triumph That which made plain father and mother happy when you came among them, must suffice for you."

Dr. F. L. Hawks is thought to have seen the eulogist of Jonathan Price.

The North Carolina maps executed by Price is now but seldom seen, if at all, by our citizens, while his maps of the town of New Berne, made in 1810, is constantly before them, with the extenin the Revolutionary war, by one of brought to the port. It was presented to the British by Lady Blessington, with her name cast upon it, and if it cannot it could, for a number of years be plainly seen on the corner where it now stands.
