The schooner Eucine Reynolds carried out yesterday an engine and boiler, made by Edwards of this city for Day & Bro. of Beaufort.

Two bales of cotton in the market yesterday. Classified low spinning and sold for 11 cents, Daily Bros. being the purchasers. It was brought in by Mr. Ned Erwin of Onslow.

In the case of State against Enoch Banks for an assault on John Jordan, which was before the Mayor on Thursday, it was decided by the Mayor yesterday that Enoch was not guilty.

We learn that there is some trouble about selecting a name for the new steamer which is being built for the New Berne and Pamlico Steam Transportation company. Call it the "Journal" and it will be sure to succeed.

Our Register of Deeds, Mr. Joseph Nelson has left hand badly hurt by the falling of the top of a book case in his office on Thursday. But for the presence of Mr. Wm. Foy it would have been a serious accident.

We learn that Col. Jno. N. Whitford will, in a few days, announce himself as the candidate of the true Democracy of the 9th Senatorial district, composed of Jones, Carteret, and Onslow, having received the majority vote in convention on the 16th day of August at Pollockville, and desires that Appleton Oaksmith should be his opponent, hailing from some party known or unknown.

We have a cotton factory in New Berne but hear nothing of any prospect of work. We copy an extract showing what other parts of the country are doing.

"The rapidity with which the South is developing its cotton manufacturing interests is seen in the fact that during the year 1881 and '82 the increase in the number of spindles set up was as follows: Georgia 106,000, Alabama 24,000, Tennessee 24,000, Mississippi 23,000, Louisiana 21,000, North Carolina 48,000, South Carolina 86,000; total, 361,000. The investment represented about $9,793,000, and with the sum required to operate with added, about $12,214,000."

Another Vendor. Chas. H. Foy, a prominent merchant of Trenton was in the city yesterday and says it will rain until the 31st day of September. If this is true he would make a good candidate for Sheriff.

Trenton Merchants. The Trenton merchants are going North for their fall goods as early as usual, though it is generally believed that cotton is at least two weeks later than last year. Messrs. S. E. Koonce and James Heritage left for Baltimore via the Midland Railway on Thursday. Mr. C. H. Foy left via the Old Dominion line, on the Shenandoah yesterday.

Guano Factory. Messrs. Green and Malby are going to start a fish guano business near Beaufort and their machinery is now on the way from Norfolk. The fleet with this machinery, consisting of one schooner and four sloops were seen by the Shenandoah on Thursday evening in Pamlico sound beyond Roanoke marshes, under way, as if they were making for a harbor. On being hailed by Capt. Southgate they reported "all right."

Passengers on Shenandoah. ARRIVALS. Mrs. Griffin and Miss Blanche Griffin, from Elizabeth City; J. L. Fentress and Miss Mattie Bull, from Norfolk and Geo. Credle from Nags Head.

DEPARTURES. Mr. S. H. Fowler of Payboro, C. H. Fowler of Stonewall, Stephen G. Roberts, T. A. Green, W. E. Patterson, T. F. Margies, J. B. Bonner for New York and Baltimore, Prof. M. Fetter for Elizabeth City, C. H. For for Baltimore, L. M. Ironmonger, R. O. Kehoe and Mrs. J. W. Walker and children for Norfolk.

My Son's Lecture. We regret very much our inability to attend the lecture delivered by our County Superintendent, Mr. Jno. S. Long, on Thursday night before the Normal School at St. Andrews chapel. We had written a notice of the lecture which should have appeared in Thursday's issue, but it shared the fate of other local matter which had been hung on the book and overlooked by the type.

We learn that the lecture was very interesting and instructive. The subject, "The duties of a Teacher," was handled in a masterly manner, and the duties of pupil and parent were clearly pointed out as well as those of teacher.

Magistrate's Court.

The case of Caroline Canady for the murder of her infant came up before Esq. Stanley on Thursday. The evidence was not sufficient to commit the defendant, but she was bound over on "probable cause" in the sum of $500. for her appearance at the next term of the Superior Court.

Yesterday Ann Row, col., was brought before Esq. Stanley upon the complaint of Jane Pew, col., for an assault. The judgment of the court, was that the defendant be discharged and the prosecutrix pay the cost. The court further adjudged that the prosecutrix was both drunk and crazy, and ordered her to jail.

Your Name in Print. Mr. Geo. Allen left for Petersburg yesterday morning.

Mr. J. B. Webb and daughter, Miss Emma arrived on the Tiger Lily Thursday night and took the train for Kinston yesterday morning.

Bryant McCullen, Jr., returned from Hylite on the Tiger Lily on Thursday night accompanied by Miss Mattie Middleton. Mrs. McCullen took the train for Kinston yesterday morning; Miss Middleton left for Morehead City last night.

Miss Anna Thigpen, daughter of Capt. J. B. Thigpen of Edgecombe, and Miss Martha King of Pitt are visiting relatives in the city.

Mr. J. G. Parker of Jones county was in the city yesterday, and reports rather wet for cotton. He speaks of moving to the city if the Graded School should be started.

Messrs. C. B. Woodley and J. C. Green were in the city yesterday.

The Jewels in Extra Session.

On Friday morning the jewels met at the corner by accident and went into an extraordinary session on the Pollockville convention. There were two additions to the Panel from Jones county, one representing the modern Democracy, the other an old line, Henry Clay Whig. The old Panel appeared contented to ask questions to be answered by these disciples of Jefferson and Clay, as they were both present at the convention.

Old Panel. "Why did you nominate Col. Askew? he is getting too old, and will hardly be able to stand the vigorous canvass that will be waged against him by Independents, Liberals and Radicals."

Young Democrat. "We could not nominate anybody else; the Col. was the only man the Jones county delegates could unite upon. He has always held the party together in the county, and he will come as near carrying the party strength as any man in the county."

Old Whig. "The Democrats must not go back on Col. Askew because he is old. He made more votes for the Democratic party in 1876 than any other one man in the United States. They used to make me fight him, now I want him to fight some of the other old Democrats. He will be elected. If he don't carry the party strength in his own county the other counties will elect him anyhow."

The Panel at this juncture wanted to know why Whitford couldn't be nominated if the county convention had declared in his favor.

Young Democrat—"It was not generally known when the county convention would be held some townships were not represented at all, and this being the case the delegates only wanted to show their willingness to carry out the instructions of the convention, as they felt free after the first ballot to our loose from Whitford."

The question now to be decided when the Panel meets in regular session is "how many times must an instructed delegate vote according to instructions, and secondly how an instructed delegate any right to enter into a combination to defeat the object of his instructions. Some but the old Panel will be entitled to vote on these questions."

Beware of the Mad Dog.

On last Friday a dog belonging to Mr. Eli Powell was killed. He had hydrophobia. Had been to Mr. Jonathan Fenmore's and bitten his dog. Thence he went to Alva Smith's and tore the dress of a negro girl, thence to preaching at a colored church and seemed bent upon the wicked design of breaking it up for he seized the parol of a colored woman, then when her husband came to her relief the canine robbed him of his shirt. Thence he went off and bit Jones' boy, then tore a little child horribly and bit its mother in the hand who went to its relief. He next went to Roseville and bit Mr. George McDougal's daughter. He then whipped all of Sheriff Clark's dogs and was finally killed by a blow from a stick in the hand of a colored man. The man had difficulty in killing him, as he was a large dog and fought ferociously. —Wadesville Enterprise.

Official Report of the Jones County Meeting.

Messrs. J. E. O'Hara, E. R. Dudley, R. S. Taylor, Robert Hancock, Jr., L. J. Moore, and Col. G. T. Wasson made speeches here to-day, after which Mr. Arnold Mills offered the following resolution which was adopted:

Resolved, That we, the Republicans of Jones county, in mass meeting assembled, do endorse and ratify the nomination of Hon. James E. O'Hara for a seat in the 48th Congress of the United States, and do pledge him our active and hearty support in the election.

Struck by Lightning.

STONEWALL, Aug. 18th, 1882. During a thunderstorm yesterday, lightning struck the house of Mr. Dennis Rawls, about one and a half miles below here while he and his family were at the table eating dinner, shivering some of the corner parts, upsetting the chimneys, knocking the spoons out of the hands of someone who were using them, scattering the knives and forks off of the table and stunning more or less all who were in the house. All escaped without further personal injury.

Rain fell in torrents, the second flood we have had this week.

Notice! Notice!

To the man who wrote the article in the NEW BERNE JOURNAL headed "shoofly items," printed August 10th, 1882.—Now, Mr. "Shoofly Items," I am the young man that you said told the old man a falsehood, and I now say, sir, that you have told a falsehood; and, besides that, sir, if you will give me your name I will defend myself. But I am the man that you spoke of trading Wm. O'Neal the horse and Isay, sir, that I did not go to O'Neal to trade horses but he came to me. He came to my house on the 12th day of March, 1882, and we traded horses, and I now say, "Shoofly Items," I just fully contend, that I never recommended the horse highly to O'Neal, nor did I tell him a falsehood; but I do say, sir, that you have told a falsehood, and you know it, sir, and I ask you for your name and if you are a gentleman you will give me your name. WILEY J. MAYO.

An Exciting Chase After a Convict.

The position of guard to a penitentiary is not always a pleasant one. A few days ago a negro convict at work on the Ducktown branch of the W. N. C. R. R. made his escape from the quarters near Webster, in Jackson county. Being a "trusty" sometime elapsed before his absence was noticed. Two guards were then sent on horseback after him, one taking the Georgia road, the other the road leading to South Carolina. In a few days he was captured near the South Carolina line, about sixty miles from Webster, and the guard started to return with his prisoner, having him securely pinioned. When within fifteen miles of the quarters, he begged to be untied, giving as a reason that the ropes were cutting his arms and cramping him so as to retard his walking. The guard finally took the ropes off and put him in front. Passing along a ridge with an embankment on one side of about 20 feet, the prisoner suddenly made a leap down it. The guard attempted to fire on him but his gun failed to fire; he then left his horse and started after him on foot. During the descent both of the men fell, but the guard regained his footing first and attempted to shoot his man without effect, however. By this time the prisoner was up and running, but soon stumbled and fell again. The guard despairing of his rifle jumped upon the negro hoping to overpower him. But the convict proved too much for him, throwing him down and choking him fearfully. The guard was also cut in the throat and on his hands, but not seriously, although his collar was cut to pieces. Finally, in order to save his own life he promised the convict if he would let him up, he would not attempt to carry him any farther. After this the negro let him up and possessing himself of the gun, which was close by, forced the guard to mount his horse and return towards the quarters alone. Up to the last account he had not been captured. —Greensboro Patriot.

FISH GUANO.

The Menhaden Fisheries—How the Fish are Caught—Guano Manufacturing, Etc.

HASLET, N. C., Aug. 15, 1882. MESSRS. EDITORS:—The South, with her great beds of fossil bones, has a never failing supply of that necessity to our crops, phosphoric acid. But the great question since Peruvian guano has become poorer, higher and scarcer, is where shall we get our nitrates? also indispensable, and the agricultural world is looking to the Menhaden Fisheries for them. I believe an article descriptive of the catching, manufacture, etc., would be interesting to the great bulk of your many readers.

A short time since I visited the factory of the Messrs. Dye at Lenoxxville, three miles east of Beaufort. I was much surprised at its capacity and thoroughness. Situated on one of the safest little harbors to be found near Beaufort—where nothing was damaged a few years since in the great storm which visited that locality—Nature seems to have formed the harbor just the size, shape, locality and capacity for a fish factory. It is near the centre of the best fishing grounds in the South—North River and its many bays on the North-Straits, Core and Pamlico Sounds for eighty or one hundred miles on the east; Beaufort harbor and the bight of Cape Lookout (the best fishing for all fish from a whale to a mackerel, on the coast) on the south, and Newport River and Bogue Sound on the west. It is situated, as you see, like a great spider's web, ready and willing to entangle any fish that runs in these waters, in their great purse nets, which are sixty feet deep. When any fish are found even well out to sea, these nets are thrown around them from boats, the ends drawn together and secured, and then with an ingenious contrivance of ropes and blocks at the bottom, they are drawn together like a purse, securing sometimes hundreds of barrels. Then the fishermen proceed, with dip nets, to leisurely take them on board, and when the boat is loaded carry them to the factory, a building several hundred feet long by fifty wide, with two rows of tanks, each eight feet long, four wide and four deep, running entirely through the building back to what they call the "boards," which is a smooth, solid floor of well-laid pine plank, covering an acre, for drying the scrap after the oil has been extracted.

Between these two rows of great tanks a railway runs from the wharf through the building to the "boards." The fish are hoisted by steam from the vessels and dumped into the dumpy cars, which are run along and emptied into the tanks, where, ingeniously made steam pipes extend to the bottom. When the tanks are full the steam is turned on from powerful boilers, and in a very short time the fish are reduced to a pulpy mass. The tankers then emptied with twelve-prong forks into the great press basket on the railway, and run under powerful hydraulic presses, where the pulp is reduced to a solid mass and is run to the boards, scattered, dried, and then deposited in the great warehouse, with a capacity of one thousand tons, and is ready for shipment.

The oil and water run to a receptacle below and thence to the oil tanks, where the oil rises to the surface. A jointed tube, to which is attached a funnel, runs down and outside to the oil barrels. The funnel, which is movable, is lowered nicely until it is to the bottom of the oil. The oil is then run from the surface of the water down the funnel into the barrels, ready for shipment. Nothing can be more simple and complete.

But how do they handle these great fish just across this little creek? There is a great horizontal reel, sixteen feet in diameter and twenty-foot long, turned by cranks. One end of the net is attached to the reel, and in a few minutes the net is wound smoothly around it where it soon dries. Should it rain it washes the salt from them, so they are not damp, and will last for years.

The Messrs. Dye have lately built and launched a steamer expressly for fishing at sea, in harbour, sound or river, and it is admirably adapted to the purpose for which she was built, and will carry about five hundred barrels of fish; so now they can go fishing with every convenience, comfort and even luxury at hand by steam. Surround the fish by steam, pursue them by steam, dip them out by steam, carry them to the factory by steam, hoist them out by steam, cook them by steam and press them by steam and will, when there is some regular line ship them by steam to Wilmington, their present market or elsewhere where superphosphates are made. It takes about fifty barrels of fish to make one barrel of oil, and it is worth about twenty-five dollars, and the dried scrap forty dollars per ton. The wonderful energy of these young men is worthy of all praise. These great buildings, wharves, tanks and even the steamers, except the calking, were built by them. Even the chimneys, models of masonry, were built by them. The numerous water craft they own, with constant growing and attention, will defy the salt water worm and keep them in splendid order; and should the Menhaden continue to come in sufficient numbers, five hundred barrels per day, they never again sun themselves in the great Bay between Barnegat and Cape Cod, but will make our lands rich and these live young men richer. Yours truly, J. F. LATHAM.
