Fashlonable Bables

Next to dogs (says a Saratogs correspondent) in importance comes the babies and their maids. These are a decided fenure on the porches of the great hotels. Some of the nurse-maids have, on their white caps, two long streamers of gay striped sash ribbon, reaching nearly to the ground behind others will have a square of diaphanous veiling pinned over their nurse caps from the front. In one way or another the maid's attire must minister to the whim or the pomp or the mistress.

One particular girl-baby at the States, rejoicing in the name of Catalina, is carried about on a pillow resting in her norse's arms, the pillow and the baby's dress being stiff with costly embroidery on a sheer white ground-work, displayed one day over a pink foundation, another day over a blue or lavender, and the maid's dress will be of chintz or gingham of exactly the same shade. Thus baby, pillow and nurse form a symphony in blue, or pink, or purple, as the case may be. This is called the "prize baby" of the States, and the Union has one nearly as time. I don'tknow just why I am sorry for such pampered babies, but I axi. Said Emerson: "When I think how I am sparing my boy all that made me—the barelooted chambers and the stern denials of poverty—I know I am making a mistake; but," he added after stern denials of poverty—I know I am making a mistake; but," he added after a pause, "I can not help it."

Plain, Straightforward Answer. Lawyers who demand precision in a witness sometimes get it with interest. Farmer Marston, of Norway, Me, riding one day in his one-horse wagon ran over one day in his one-horse wagon ran over and killed one of Sam Pingree's pigs Pingree sued him, and at the trial of the case one of Marston's witnesses was Uncle Tim Smith, a good old soul—as honest as the day is long—truthful and simplehearted—albeit, a little inclined to tell big stories of his own exploits. Uncle Tim had seen the whole thing—had seen the pig run nuder the horse's feet, coming very near to throwing Marston's team into a complete wreck. Holden took his witness in hand to cross-examine him. examine him.

"Now see here, Mr. Smith. We want none of your s'posin's—none of your ifs or buts; but I want you to give plain, straightforward answers to my question. Now, then, give your attention. You saw Mr. Marston—the defendant in this case—driving his carriage past Mr. Pingree's dwelling?

What? You did not so declare under

What! You did not see Mr. Marston driving past Mr. Pingree's dwelling?"
'Yes-I did!'

Your honor!' exclaimed Holden, turning to the Justice with fire in his eye and a thunder-cloud upon his brow,— But the Judge did not allow him to Confine yourself to the witness, Mr. Holden. Evidently, he knows what he is talking about.'

Then, boiling with wrath, the peppery lawyer returned to the witness, who stood as camby cool and serene as an stood as camly cool and serene as an autumnal morning in harvest-time.
Witness! I will ask you once more.
Did you not tell this court in your direct testimony, that you stood near, and were looking on when Mr. Marston passed my client's house?

'Yes, sir, -I did.'
'And now, sir, what was he driving?'
'It: was drivin' his Hoss, sir,'
