THE SECOND ATTACK. Between the 11th and the 18th of July the Confederates strength-ened Fort Wagner as far as was possible and largely increased the garrison, having discovered that Gilmore desired to go to Charles-ton by way of Morris Island. Up to the 11th Wagner had given no the watch for and the watch for and In the problem of the process of the provided upper state of the process of the pro

They found themselves tumbling into deep pits, falling over sand ridges, and utterly confused by the work of the shells. The moat was full of water at one point and filled with sand at another, and the paratets were simply banks full of with saud at another, and the parapets were simply banks full of caverns. The lines of formation were broken up, the darkness was confusing, and in ten minutes those able to withdraw made a hasty retreat. It was most fool-bardy assund of the mar There hardy assault of the war. There was no show whatever, no matter what bravery was exhibited, and the confusion was added to by the action of the colored troops. They no sooner saw what sort of trap they were in than dozens of them shouted out: "Hold on! Don't shoot -I surrender !" Twelve hundred Confederates, cool and fresh, and safely protected, had only to fire away at a brigade of Federals-broken, confused, and tumbling over each other. That brigade did

THE FORCES. THE FORCES. THE FORCES. At this time the Federals held a good share of Morris Island, and had not about fifty guns and mor-tars into position, each one able to hurl its missile into the fort. These
