The following lines were handed to us, at our request, by Rev. Fred. W. Eason, a gentleman of learning and good taste in polite letters, and with whose approval we commend them to our readers:

IN SCHOOL DAYS. Still sits the school-house by the road, A ragged beggar sunning; Around it still the sumachs grow. And blackberry vines are running. Within, the master's desk is seen, Deep scarred by raps official: The warping floor, the battered seats, The jack-knife's carved initial. Long years ago, a winter sun, Shone over it at setting;

Lit up its western window panes And low eaves icy fretting. It touched the tangled golden curls,
And brown eyes full of grieving:
And one who still her steps delayed.
Where pride and shame were mingling. Pushing with restless feet the snow To right and left, she lingered— As restlessly her tiny hand The blue-checked apron fingered. He saw her lift her eyes; he felt The soft hand's light caressing, And heard the trembling of her voice As if a fault confessing.

"I'm sorry that I spelt the word; I hate to go above you, Because' —the brown eyes lower fell— "Because you see, I love you." Still memory to a gray hair man That sweet child's face is showing; Dear girl! The grasses on her grave... Have forty years been growing. He lives to learn in life's hard school, How few who pass above him, Lament their triumphs and his loss, Like her, because they love him.

Very interesting bastardy proceedings were had last Saturday before Just talent and education. Mr. McDonald tice Haskins and a jury at Primus Milyear. It proved a good stand by in ler's court house in Jones county. wherein Laura Miller, a colored damsel, and James Cox, a white gentleman, essayed to fix the paternity of their troubles and their happiness. On the trial, D. E. Perry, attorney for the woman, dandled the "little one" in his arms before the jury, claiming a verdict on the principle of similitude to the reputed father, which he declared was all-sufficient to shed upon the intricacy of contrary impressions what Coke calls 'the gladsome light of jurisprudence." The jury, however, was puzzled to determine which the child most resembled, the defendant or his married brother, yet rather than raise a fuss in a three Sundays of every month. family by the judgment, they found the issue of posterity against the unmarried Young wives for old husbands doubtless first suggested itself to our Creator a long time after Adam had been placed ticular epoch in his life it first "seemed good for man not to be alone," does not appear, yet it is evident Adam was just in his prime, if not an old man, when Eve was given to him as a helpmate. This view of it was taken by President Tyler when he informed his friend, said Wise, "she is too young for you." "Not at all," replied the President "I'm still in my prime." "That reminds me," said Wise, "of an old darkey down in Virginia, who was generally consulted by his old master on any affair of importance to both. The old master was a widower, and when he got the consent of a young lady to marry him, he communicated the fact to the old darkey. 'My Lord,' said Sambo, 'she is too young for you.' 'Not a bit of it.' answered the master, 'I'm still in my prime.' 'Yes,' responded Sambo, 'you are in your prime now, but wait till she gets in her prime, then where will your prime be?""
