SCHOOL BUILDINGS. If there is any one thing needed in New Berne at this time to denote the enterprise, thrift and progressiveness of its citizens, it is a school building. The old Academy building is totally insufficient, and is not creditable to the city. Any one at all acquainted with the wants of a school knows that the first requisite is a good, commodious, well ventilated house; and furthermore it should be all in one building. That the necessity exist is, how shall we get it? We see but one way, and that is by private subscription, unless the Trustees of Berne desire its continuance, they will attract pupils from abroad. We mean paying pupils. The school has now a reputation sufficient to justify the Trustees in A stable-keeper cannot get his charging reasonable tuition fees for pay for horses let on Sunday, nor of the city. We see the receipts of the Graded School of Goldsboro from this source are more than ten times the amount received here.

With a suitable building there will be no trouble in securing at least one hundred paying pupils in our school. We thought this matter over on Thursday last after hearing John F. Wooten, Esq., read the report of the Directors of Kinston College, at the close of the commencement A barber may bring suit and get that an organization for the establishing of a school of high grade in that town, was effected on the 24th of May, 1882; a stock company was organized; about three thousand dollars raised; a suitable lot purchased, and a building erected and ready for the opening of the school on the first day of the following September. This was done too, in a town about half the size of New Berne, with one half of her citizens supporting another good school. Now we submit that if Kinston, divided, can accomplish this much in the short space of four months, New Berne, united, onght to have a building amply sufficient by the opening of the Graded School next fall; and if the people here have the cause at heart and know the key-note of a town's spontaneous growth, they will go to work at once. Aak a citizen of Kinston ments yet of the sale of the cause at heart and know the key-note of a town's spontaneous growth, they will go to work at once. Ask a citizen of Kinston what gave his fown such a boom what gave his fown such a boom within the last ten or twelve years and he will tell you at once that her good schools did the work. Ask a citizen of New Berne what has kept the old town on a stand still so long and he can truthfully point to the old time honored Academy and consequences. ny there is the same old building that was here one hundred years ago, the growth of a city must be spoutaneous with the growth of her educational interest, unlong as that is at a discount so long will everyhing else drag. We do not mean to say that New Berne has been ly negligent of her educ interest; we can bear testimony to the existence of quite a number of private schools, conducted by thoroughly competent teachers, be-fore the opening of the Graded School, but their efforts were so divided and triftered away that the entside world did not look upon the city as one of educational pro-
