THE VIRGINIA PLATFORM.

The platform adopted by the Virginia Democrats in the Lynchburg Convention makes a dead issue of the debt question. This publicans. The Richmond Whig, Readjuster, regards this dodge as the only sensible thing in the plat- anxiety to reduce stocks even at a form. This not only takks those who entertain strong prejudices against the system on account of the manner of collecting the taxes, but it also pleases the we shall have a lower tariff no matter than the second in it. rotective tariff men who see in it the necessity of keeping up the present high tariff. But imme ly following this plank is one declaring in favor of a "tariff for revenue," with the word only left out. The last platform made by the Democrats of North Carolina was wofully inconsistent and we don't believe it made a single vote for the party. About as good a platform as any party could adopt would be semething like the following:

Resolved, That we will use all the neans within our power to defeat the opposite party.

And if a preamble should be thought necessary they might

"WHEREAS, we are in need of the fices now held by our opponents." There would be nothing inconsistent in these.

THERE are two strong reasons for the Western popularity of Jos. E. McDonald of Indiana for Presi dent. The first is that in the very height of the greenback folly and fury, he never surrendered to clamor or made compromises with his principles. When demagoguery distracted his party and threatened and recovered his senses in time to the credit of the country with the heresies of irredeemable currency, he stood firmly for the honest these funds and soon got the money of the Constitution. The second is that he never tampered Faunet of the French Academy of with protection, but firmly and Sciences, a rapidity of movement consistently supported a tariff for in the spread of cholera is always revenue equal to the needs of econfollowed by a correspondingly rapid omical government. "I was very sorry to see the South," he continued, "rush out as she did in 1860; in fact, I did not believe she would do it. I sold goods to a customer here in my store from down there who had on his aniform at the time and told me they were in earnest, but I thought it would all blow over. I sold him the goods on our old terms, six months credit, but I had to wait a little over four years for that bill."
"But did you ever get it?"

"Yes, indeed; but by rather an accident. I wrote the party after the war, but got no answer; and thought perhaps he was dead as many others were, but one day a friend of mine in this city inquired if I had ever heard from that party down South, I told him no, and asked why he wished to know; he said there had some funds accumulative in his hands through some business relations, which stood to the credit of this party on his books and he wished to inform him of it if he could learn his whereabouts. I then instituted proceedings necessary to have my bill paid out of money, but was sorry to learn afterwards that my Southern friend was very angry about the matter. Yes sir, I have dealt with the South and always liked the people and have been treated well by them and am greatly rejoiced to see that she is on the road to prosperity and when your cducational interest is You formerly sold largely of

If the Residuster movement deserved such epithests as was applied to it by the Funders we hardly think that part of the platform in reference to the public debt will strengthen the Democrats. Once you convince honest people, who do not understand the ways and tricks of politicians, that a measure is dishonest, disgraceful to the State and a swindle berger bill was a cheat a
