FLORIDA newspapers have their jokes about their swamp lands. One of them says that they are to be sold "by the gallon."

If men and women were compelled to overload their stomachs, as school children are compelled to overload their brains, there would be universal dyspepsia.

THE New York Times says a presidential candidate presenting himself as a Pennsylvania-high-protectionist-free-whiskey-Republican-Democrat would not stand much of a chance. This outlines Dossey Battle's idea of Samrandallism.

THE price of postage stamps having been recently reduced one-third, farmers and others who use hired labor are thinking of bringing wages down proportionately. This may be fair enough, considering the vast amount of money our peculiar laborers invest in writing letters. Income and expense go hand in hand.

OUR readers need have no fears of a short cotton crop or that the business world will be injuriously affected thereby. It is yet uncertain how many bales the present crop will reach. The receipts, so far, are in excess of last season and the bulk of the crop is now very probably in market. These receipts prefigure a crop of six million bales, but it may be that much of the cotton is retained at home and the crop in the market be about five and three-quarter million bales. The continued dry weather forced the early maturity of the crop, which has been gathered in finer condition for market than in years past. The quality of the article being superior, the prices have averaged better and the returns will compare favorably with those of any other years.

It is doubtless best for the cotton producer occasionally to have short crops to neutralize the over-production of the article and occasionally heavy yields to reduce the price that the farmer may not be seized with the craze of speculation. Continuous high prices would stimulate the production and engage all the hopes and energies of the planter on this one article. Striking the average between big crops and low prices and small crops and high prices, the farmer is more inclined not to risk all on one crop. The croakers to the contrary, the country never was in a more prosperous condition and there need be no fear of ruin and bankruptcy while six million bales of cotton are made and fair average prices are obtained.

A man in Ohio was in the habit of visiting a neighboring town and getting drunk. One night on his return home, with several sheets in the wind, he approached his house, saw no light, and suspected that his wife had gone to bed. "Now, Mary has gone to bed," he said, "and hasn't anything for me to eat. I'll make it warm for her." But in a moment he saw a light, and then said: "I'll be blessed if the extravagant thing isn't sitting up till this hour of night burning out my oil. Now, darn me if I don't make it hot for her."

WASHINGTON LETTER.

November 19th, 1883.

There is beginning to be a decided improvement in the appearance of Washington. Animation and excitement have overcome the apathy and sluggishness of some months past. The uneventful current of official life is broken by the advent of members of the new Congress which convenes December 3d, and the gathering of the crowds who follow Congress like a flock of crows; the reader can carry the simile further if he wants to. For Congress is almost here and the crowds are settling down into place. These latter find the roosting places not altogether unoccupied, and there is the usual amount of fluttering and screaming, and fighting, and crowding together, to get settled; the crows already on the premises feeling very loth to be disturbed in their pleasant quarters, at cheap prices, and those coming being very hungry and voracious and self asserting. Among these crows it is safe to assume that there is a pretty large flock or crowd, called in general parlance "the lobby." I will tell you in a few words just what the lobby is, and what it is doing, and something about what it proposes to do this winter. To be brief, the lobby is made up of a class of agents and speculators who engage in urging Congress to pass certain laws which effect the interests of their, the lobbyists clients or employers. For instance if John Roach wishes a subsidy for building certain steamships he may employ sharp and plausible men to circulate among members of Congress, make their acquaintance, and enlist their interest in the scheme, or if the whisky dealers want legislation which will relieve them of taxation they may maintain a lobby at Washington to fight tooth and nail for them. And so a thousand interests which are effected more or less by congressional action, keep paid or interested agents at the National capital to represent them by fair means if possible, by bribery and corruption if necessary.

This "Third House," as it is sometimes called, has its degrees or qualities of membership scaling down from lawyers of influence engaged in creditable enterprises, to its adventurers and hangers on who live by their wits. The influence of this latter class is mostly imaginary. They pretend to be able to sell government situations, or to secure the passage of claims, or the vote of a certain member or members, and they are occasionally able to get a victim to pay cash for this assumed power. Just now this class of lobbyists is doing a profitable business in disposing of their "influence" to aspirants for the offices in the House and Senate. It is not a difficult matter for them to appear to be on intimate terms with some influential representative. They find excuses for being seen at his residence frequently. They haunt the open reception room at the President's mansion, and they make it a point to call public men by their nicknames as if they were their bosom friends, when in fact such acquaintance as they have is forced upon the unwilling but obliging representative of the people, who perhaps knows nothing of their schemes. The success of many of these pretenders and frauds, is marvellous. One of the fictions represented by such men as these, oftentimes and loudest, is connection with some newspaper. I understand that the Press Club of Washington will make an endeavor this winter, to free the papers represented here from such disreputable associations.

The legitimate lobby, so to classify those who actually represent business interests, expect to have a very busy time this session. There are several important projects of internal improvement which are represented by members of the National Board of Trade, which meets here in December; and the revision of the tariff laws which is contemplated, will be very wide sweeping in its effect on individual industries.

A Lignist's Fall. A tall man impressively polite in his manner accosted a well known citizen on Third street, Troy, N. Y., Tuesday evening. "My friend," said the tall man, "I am a furrier from Worcester, Mass. I have walked all the way here to Troy. I am familiar with the French, Latin, and Greek languages, and can speak several East Indian tongues. But I am really in need of something to eat. Can you help me by giving me a little money?" "Do you speak Hebrew?" said the citizen. "I must confess I am unacquainted with Hebrew." "Well, here's ten cents for not speaking Hebrew," said the citizen. "Be gob," was the reply, "pays sometimes not to know too much, don't it?" At 4:30 o'clock the next morning a man answering the description of the stranger was found drunk on a stoop. In the Police Court he gave the name of Philip Burns, and was sent to jail for ten days.—Troy Times.

STATE NEWS.

Gleaned from our Exchanges.

Wilmington Review: The new harness for the Little Giant's horses has been suspended and works like a charm. The horses were practiced last night and the handsome animals were out of the stalls and hitched to the engine for a start in fifteen seconds after the signal of alarm was given.

Raleigh Visitor: A young gentleman, in one of our leading dry goods stores, had put on a ladies' Russian circular to show it to a lady customer, when another lady entered and was about to kiss him, mistaking him for a lady friend. She blushed and went to another part of the store to look at some gloves. She will hardly ever attempt to kiss another girl who has on a long circular, before seeing her face.

Franklinton Weekly: On Tuesday last W. H. Mitchell, Esq., brought into our office a turnip that measured 22 inches around. After delighting our optic nerves by viewing its huge dimensions for some time we sent it home, had it cooked and found the one turnip would make our whole family an ample meal. It was one of the sweetest turnips we ever tasted. We returned to our work after dinner ready to pronounce Squire Mitchell the champion turnip grower of all the country round about. Just then our young friend Isaac Williams came in with two so large that he had to carry one under each arm. They weighed seven pounds each. And this is not a good turnip year either.

Greensboro Patriot: A dispatch received here this morning states that a party of enthusiastic Kantchakians, prospecting for the best climate in the world, left San Francisco yesterday for Greensboro. They are traveling in a special car and will reach this place one day next week. We suggest that our board of trade take the matter under immediate advisement and prepare to give our fur lined and fur covered neighbors a hospitable reception. We understand that it is the intention of the city authorities to call a public meeting at once, to the end that the people and the different city organizations, including the fire and water commissioners, may co-operate. If Greensboro could so handsomely entertain the Duke of Newcastle, traveling incognito, on very short notice, what can't the glorious old town do when she half tries!
