THE JOURNAL.

H. S. NUNN, Editor. NEW BERNE, N. C., NOV. 23, 1883.

When the word "ton" is used in the tariff, it means 2240 pounds; but when you find it in your guano bill, what does it mean?

The White Ants and "Beast" Butler are getting the best of the Massachusetts people. Between the Ants and the "Beast," it is believed Plymouth Rock must go.

Forty-two million acres of land in Texas have been devoted to the use of schools and asylums. Texas is the true empire State of the Union and has an imperial method of doing things which no other State can successfully imitate.

From every quarter the telegraph brings tidings of disastrous fires. The sudden changes of weather and high winds increase, at the same time, the risk of fire and the difficulty in subduing it. Too great caution cannot be observed in re-kindling the fires in disused furnaces, heaters and stoves.

Gov. Butler, of Massachusetts, threatens to put himself at the head of a workingman's party as a candidate for President in 1884. In this way he hopes to wreak his vengeance on both the "blue blood" Republicans and Democrats of his State, between whom he properly divides the blame for his last defeat.

There is no steady harm in women who are passionate. They may kill you or run off with another man, but their acts are impulses and the creatures thereof—there is no settled calculation in them. But a cool woman, who can act from forethought, and says what she intends to do and afterwards does it, is to be avoided. And that class are always blondes.

Poultry Raising as a Business.

There is just now much interest in poultry raising, and a disposition to take it up on a large scale. The following extract from one of our recent letters will give an idea of the many inquiries made of us: "Is poultry raising a profitable business, and would you advise a young man to invest one thousand dollars in it?" This might be answered in brief: Poultry are profitable, and we would not advise a young man (nor an old one) to at once invest one thousand dollars in it.

When and How to Sell Crops.

The farmer who knows when and how to sell his crops to the best advantage, says the Husbandman, is more fortunate than his fellows who lack such knowledge. There can be no definite rule by which to insure always the best prices, but there are certain general rules, well established, that may be observed with profit.

The first requisite in entering the market with reasonable expectation of obtaining prices for products that will afford profit on the labor of producing them is, that they be of good quality and deliverable in good order. A farmer who has a crop of wheat threshed soon after harvest, well cleaned and stored in bins, is able to exert some influence in fixing the price.

If the farmer's word be as good as his bond, when he says "yes," that should mean that the crop will be delivered promptly upon the time specified with no possibility of failure, barring such accidents as are beyond human control.

It is true that careful observance of these requirements will not always secure the prices necessary to bring profit, but it will secure the best prices that are paid at that time.

Then comes the question about delay, about holding products for better prices. Of this personal judgment must be the sole guide. Many a farmer, not satisfied with current rates for his products, holds without definite ideas about chances; without informing himself what influences are exerted, to advance or depress prices, simply waiting, Micawber-like, for something to turn up.

After all it is not a bad rule for any farmer to sell his products whenever the prices afford satisfactory profit. When the markets are steady, with general tendencies upward, and he has full understanding of the situation, he may wait without incurring risks, that is to say, he may await his convenience for the delivery—take his own time when it will best fit into the general work.

The influences which govern the markets differ very greatly from those of a few years ago. Now all the principal products of the farm may be delivered in large cities from an extent of country vastly beyond that which forty years ago was the restricted source of supply. Wheat is delivered from Chicago, St. Louis or Milwaukee as quickly as a few years ago it could be delivered from counties adjacent to the cities which are the ultimate markets, and the same is true of all other farm products, including cattle, sheep and swine.

Improving Farm Homes and Grounds.

The immediate surroundings of farmers' homes generally are far from being as attractive in appearance as they can easily be made. Indeed the rural front yards are, as a rule, much less beautiful and interesting than those of people in the same general circumstances in towns and cities.

There may be points in which life on the farm lacks the attractions common to town life, but in charming home grounds the farmer is certainly to blame if the city dweller exceeds him. It is often wondered why country life has not charms sufficient to hold the boys to the farm, and that they grow up longing for the city.

Now that long evenings are at hand, this subject should receive due consideration. Plans may be drawn up for an improved arrangement of walks, drives, flower beds, shrubbery, borders, and other matters. Every detail of these can be decided upon, and entered upon a map, long before winter is over, so that when spring opens the work can go on intelligently and to the best advantage.
