Circus-Riders.

A little boy known as Leo Carlo was recently brought into court in Philadelphia, to testify to his brutal ill-treatment by the manager of a circus. The child-whose real name and parentage had been forgotten long ago-had been in the circus since his infancy, and was now in training for a bare-back rider.

He charged that his master, as he called the manager, compelled him to ride an unbroken horse, that frequently threw him. Whenever this happened he was beaten, kicked and at last the sharp spike with which elephants are picked was plunged into his body.

During the course of the trial, many noteworthy items with regard to circuses were brought to light. It was stated that to become an acrobat a child must be put in training as early as its third year. The master stands over the child with a whip during each lesson.

gave the public a glimpse behind the curtain of the circus tent. The "woman with the iron jaw," who was noted for her enormous strength, had a child that she called her son, but had bought when he was a baby, shoes, Etc. and whom it was proved she systematically starved and drugged with gin to keep him below a certain

There are many of our boy-read-Gail & Ax Snuit ers in country places who have been dazzled by the glories of the travel-ling circus. The ring, glittering with lights, is fairy-land, and the flying figures in velvet and spangles, the happy creatures who dwell therein. These the boys envy with a fierce contempt of their own homes and work.

They forget that the fun, in all shows, belongs to the audience, the work to the performers.

There is, perhaps, no trade which requires harder or more constant manual labor than that of the constant manual labor than the constant mand the constant manual labor than the constant manual labor than cus-rider. His days are taken up with rehearsals, he travels all night, and lodges in the lowest inns. The mistake or the fall at which he laughs and the clown jokes, will be punished behind the curtain by a he is a man, by the profane curses

Stick to your farm, boys, or your school! There is no tempting Dead Sea fruit as full of bitter ashes, as the lives of these gaudy creatures whom you so much envy.

is unrivalled for all fertilizing purposes, and especially adapted to the growth of having stood for the past eight years at the head of the list of high grade super-phosphates. The largest and most prosperous truckers in Maryland, Virginia, and North Carolina, by their voluntary testimony, declare it superior to any fertillzer in the market, producing a stronger and earlier growth, full development, prompt maturity, and a more abundant yield than any of its competitors, while it permanently enriches the soil, showing its durable effects upon even the second and third crops.

Early Trucks,

FOR COTTON

POCOMOKE reigns supreme, and wherever used sales have tripled each season. A trial is all that is necessary to establish promptly and permanently its hold upon public favor. The best lint cotton raised in Carolina during the year 1883 was from POCOMOKE.
