Fatal Accident.

Mr. William J. Gordon, a well-known insurance agent at Wilmington, met with a sudden and untimely death yes-terday, while gunning at his farm in the eastern limits of the city. The particulars of the sad affair, as far as they could be gathered, are as follows:

Mr. Gordon procured a double-barrel breech-loading shot gun from Mr. Geo. A. Peck's hardware store, about eight o'clock in the morning, and between nine and ten o'clock left his house for a few hours' sport in the fields surround-watched him afterwards as he crossed towards a line fence, separating the inclosure. Shortly afterwards the colored man heard a second shot, but did not again see Mr. Gordon. About half-past 4 in the afternoon, however, Fuller Huggins, a colored man, passing through the premises, discovered the body of Mr. Gordon lying at the drawbars of the fence that separated the two again see Mr. Gordon. About half-past 4 in the afternoon, however, Fuller Huggins, a colored man, passing through the premises, discovered the body of Mr. Gordon lying at the drawbars of the fence that separated the two fields. He at once gave information of the startling discovery and the body was removed to Mr. Gordon's residence.

From the position of the body when found it was apparent that Mr. Gordon was killed while getting through the bars. The upper bar and the two lower bars were in position, with the body of the unfortunate man resting upon the latter, face downwards, the stock of the gun between the feet, and the barrel beneath the body pressing against the breast. Death must have been instantaneous; the charge from the gun entering just below the chin, tearing away the face, the brains and the upper portion of the skull.

> 1884 Harper's Magazine, ILLUSTRATED.

HARPER'S MAGAZINE begins its sixty-eighth volume with the December Number. It is the most popular illustrated periodical in America and England, always fully abreast of the times in its treatment of subjects of current social and industrial interest, and always advancing its standard of literary, artistic and mechanical excellence. Among its attractions for 1884 are: a new serial novel by William Black, illustrated by Abbey; a new novel by E.P. Roc, illustrated by Gibson and Dielman; descriptive illustrated papers by George H. Broughton, Frank D. Millet, C. H. Farnham, and others; important historical and biographical papers; short stories by W. D. Howells, Charles Reade, etc.
