The Danville Riot.

WASHINGTON, Feb. 25.—Senator Sherman asked if the Funders were inspired by objections to persons or to race.

Mr. Wise (the witness) said it was an objection to race. Coming then to the last election for the Legislature he said, "the Bourbons were by a large majority in favor of incorporating the color line in their platform."

He read and submitted editorials in support of this statement. Two Democrats of Lynchburg, witness believed, induced the convention not to incorporate the color line into their platform.

In the canvass witness had preserved notes of his discussions with his opponents. He asserted that from the beginning to the end they had sought not to win colored votes, but to make the colored party so odious to ignorant whites as to make them stand together against it.

He submitted documents and pictures used as campaign documents. One of the latter displayed a black teacher whipping a white pupil.

When witness went to Danville to speak the local papers advised the white men to stay away. Danville and Pittsylvania were the most lawless communities in Virginia.

Pittsylvania county and the adjoining county in North Carolina were alike in this.

Senator Vance—That is a Republican county by a large majority?

Witness—Yes; and wherever there is a Republican majority, there will be Bourbon shot-guns.

Mr. Vance—There will be a large number of convictions to the penitentiary.

Witness—And crowds will go down before the mouths of Bourbon shot-guns.

Mr. Vance—I don't know as there is any necessity for you to assail North Carolina here, sir.

Witness—I allude to the matter with regret.

Witness described the crimes which he said had been committed in and about Danville. He regarded the attempt to attribute the state of excitement preceding the riot to Sim's speech as subterfuge.

The excitement was due to inflammatory publications and the effort which he had described.

Mr. Sherman asked if witness wished to say anything about the cause of the riot.

Witness said that when he went to Danville Mr. Jennings, a Readjuster, called on him and said he was a Readjuster at heart, but had been waived upon by Democrats and threatened with ruin in his business if he did not withdraw.

Jennings was compelled to join the Democrats. Witness submitted advertisements of hardware dealers from whom the rioters of November 3d obtained their arms.

In these advertisements guns, pistols and ammunition were made to appear more prominently than anything else.

During the cross examination by Senator Vance, several sharp passages at arms occurred. Mr. Wise said to Senator Vance—"When I first knew you, three years ago, you belonged to the K. N. (know nothing party); now you belong to the N. K. (negro killing party)."

Senator Vance retorted—"When I first knew you, you were a secessionist Democrat; now you are a blank."

Mr. Wise—Hardly. I was only nine years of age, and could not have been much of a secessionist.

Senator Vance—Oh! well; when a man pleads the infancy act, I have nothing more to say.

A little later Mr. Wise said, the attitudes of men had changed. "You (to Senator Vance) came up to teach us Democracy and debasing when you had repudiated your own debts and had never been a Democrat."

Senator Vance admitted having been a know nothing, but defended himself against the charges of ever being a repudiator. The man who said he had ever advocated repudiation, stated that which was untrue.

Mr. Wise hoped Gov. Vance didn't intend that to be an insult. Senator Vance said he did not; but wished merely to state facts.

In reply to some assertions personal to himself, Mr. Wise disavowed any intention to officiously parade as a witness, and avowed his unalterable determination to conduct a war upon the Bourbon party.

Mr. Wise said he did not advocate social intercourse between the races. No negro had ever presumed to claim social privileges by reason of political affiliations with him.

Colored members of the Legislature came to his house to consult him, but they always came to his kitchen. He did not suppose Tilden admitted to his parlor the wharf-rats and riff-raff of New York who voted the Democratic ticket.

Mr. Wise said there had been no disturbance on election day in Virginia. He had failed to keep one of his appointments during the canvass—that at Manchester, because of information that there would be trouble.

He was willing to die, but Manchester was the last place he would select to die in. He had no doubt there would have been a very disgraceful scene if he had gone.

The Democrats of that town had afterwards marched with a transparency—"It's a wise man who knows when to come to Manchester."

Cotton Seed and Cotton Seed Meal. The Commissioner of the Georgia Department of Agriculture, has had frequent inquiries from farmers and others for information concerning the relative fertilizing value of cotton seed—as usually employed by farmers—and cotton seed meal.

The desire for such information is the result of the establishment of cotton seed oil mills in several places and the consequent demand for cotton seed. Farmers wish to know how many pounds of meal they should receive in exchange for a given number of bushels or tons of seed.

These inquiries have always been promptly answered, and information on the subject has several times been published. In order, however, to present the comparison in a comprehensive and yet distinct form, he requested Prof. White to prepare the following tables, and they are here presented:

Table with 2 columns: Quantity and Fertilizing Value. Includes items like 100 pounds green cotton seed, Ammonia, Phosphoric acid, Potash, etc.

if this reduction of duty on cotton goods should be made.

It is said that the iron men and other manufacturers will follow with similar petitions as to other reductions, and that petitions will be addressed to other Georgia members.

Our Drinks. The Popular Science News has an article on the above subject, of which we give the chief points.

Water is essential to all forms of life. No other fluid can be found in a healthy human organization. It is the only drink which can be used without doing violence, in some degree, to man's best physical welfare.

Tea and coffee, in moderate quantities, do not, in any marked degree, influence vital activity unfavorably. The feeble and nervous, however, cannot use either of these beverages without serious discomfort or injury.

As to alcohol, it would be better for the world if the art of producing it should suddenly be lost, and the process be forever classed among the lost arts.

We do not need it in any of its forms; neither the physician, chemist, nor artisan absolutely needs it in any department of his calling; and this statement we make advisedly, after full deliberation, taking into view our present knowledge of medicine and the arts.

It is probable that very many rigid observers of hygienic laws do not use water freely enough. It is possible that we may, by habit, so modify the sensation of thirst, that it in a large degree ceases to be a safeguard of our need.

We have seen many instances of illness which were cured by resorting to the freer use of water. It supplies to the system the needed amount of liquid to maintain normal processes, and assist in repairing tissue waste.

It is constantly passing out of the system through the lungs, skin and kidneys, and if the supply is inadequate to the demand, morbid conditions ensue. Constipation often results from such deficiency, and a remedy in many cases would be the drinking of one half pint of tepid water before breakfast.

Much ice water taken at mid-time is injurious. It arrests prompt digestion, the latter requiring increased heat. Ice water should at all times be used with moderation.
