capabilities. For years there has been a crying need for more and better exercise among the students of the University. The sturdy sons of Carolina, and of the South, come to our classic halls; come of invaluable lore which is to be found amid the hoary shades of our modern Athens; but their intellectual calibre has, it cannot be reasonably doubted, been greatly lessened and weakened by the want of a strongly-developed physical life. But this no less than appalling want has at last been remedied. The Association has come to the rescue with its revivifying influences, which are already seen in the steadier walk and blooming cheeks of the young men.
