Stabbling Affray.

On last night two negroes, Oliver Moore and Daniel Stuart, got into an affray, when Moore stabbed Stuart in the back, cutting on artery near the shoulder blade. Dr. Case. Duffy was called to dress the wound and pronounced it not very dangerous. Moore was held until tomorrow morning, when he will have a preliminary hearing before the Mayor.

Without Bibles.

Her, Mr. Troy, who has been canvassing the county for the American Bible Society informs us that he has found thus far, in Craven county, one hun-dred and seventy families without Ribles. He says a large ma-jority of these are colored families, but it is astonishing how many white families—families apparently in good circumstances—who have no Bible. He gives some vary amusing moldents of his travels and efforts to distribute the Word. One man was on the point of buying when his bees swarmed and broke up the trade. Another was without a Bible but had promised himself never to buy anything from an agent, te made an appeal for the e and the purchase was made, sungetor insisted that his pa-byterian and should buy a

We had two fine, refreshing, growing showers of rain last week—one Tuesday and the other Friday.

J. G. Haynes and James Wilkins, well to do farmers, living in Woodington township, Lenoir county, died last week with pneumonia. They were in the prime of life, and their deaths were unooked for.

The town government is now fully organized, with L. A. Mewborne, sr., town constable, and W. T. Oast, night policeman. The new mayor says he intends to see "how the cat jumps" for the next twelve months. "Matches," we are told, "are made in heaven," and are believed by love-sick people to be announced on earth through that popular and facile card outter and shuffler, the mysterious Dr. Billy Haskins of Jones county. Everybody now consults him. Recently a portly grocer dealer of Kinston and a male friend of the country, accompanied by two young ladies of this county, made a sly pilgrimage in the interest of Cupid to this division of the country. diviner of unknown things. He re-ceived them austerely, cut and shuffled his cards mysteriously, uttering all the while the cabalistic phrase, "jubila, ju-bilo, jubilum," and darkly announced that the portly grocer and his fair friend would marry at the same time. They grew more loving at the decree and are sure faith is not dead yet.

Our new board of town commissioners and our distinguished mayer elect, Col. Moses, were installed into office last Thursday, all taking the oath of office before Judge Fields. After the administration of the oath the new mayor, on the court steps, in the presence of a large and appreciative audience, delivered an admirable inaugural address which for pith and point and brevity is a model for all coming statesmen: 'Fellow citizens! You have chosen me by your unanimous suffrage the chief magistrate of your beautiful town, for which I am under grateful acknowlview, however, which you are aware is no inducement, but I trust for a good and honest purpose, in which I hope and honest purpose, in which I hope in this country.

It is apparent to edgements to you, not in a pecuniary 79.43 never to deceive you. It is apparent to 62.24 all that the times are sadly out of joint. We have eyes to see that there is a downward grade in public morals. Public men are more corrupt than formerly, and the people at large are far less careful to demand of officials a faithful discharge of duty. Indeed, so venal and debase, so wanton and impudent have office-holders grown, that to the pure and educated it has almost become prima facie evidence that a man who holds office is corrupt and purchasable. My programme is short. I shall keep this town in good order, punish all drunkards, and have a mule and a cart to take away all the fifth." (Applause and music.) "Granny, will your dog bite? no child no."
