John S. Long, Esq., at Kinston.
It was our pleasure to attend the closing exercises of the Kinston graded school on Friday and hear the admirable address of our townsman, John S. Long, Esq., which he delivered to a large, select and attentive audience at Loftin's opera house. The speaker was introduced by A. J. Loftin, Esq., and chose for his subject "Nineteenth Century Perils."

As he arose and tremblingly stepped to the front, he appeared to be completely controlled by the audience, but less than ten minutes of his matchless eloquence, sublime pathos and graceful gestures completely changed the order of things and for one hour and ten minutes he held the large audience in almost breathless silence, while their minds were swayed to and fro as the perils of the present century were forcibly presented, the way to avoid them clearly pointed out, and the future, if conservatism, patriotism and the preservation of the old educational landmarks shall prevail, painted in the most beautiful language. It was a brilliant effort, the speaker seeming to throw his whole soul into his subject, and captivating his audience. "That was what I call a finished oration," said a very prominent and intelligent gentleman after the speaker took his seat, and another venerable and highly respectable citizen, one fully competent to judge, said, "It was a good speech and contained some excellent points."

Others were equally complimentary in their remarks about the address, and, to sum it up, the audience was highly pleased with the speaker and the speaker well pleased with the audience.

When Mr. Long had taken his seat Dr. H. D. Harper arose and on behalf of the ladies presented him an elegant bouquet of flowers. J. C. Kennedy, Esq., arose and in behalf of the farmers present thanked the speaker for his most excellent address.

Thus closed the exercises of the first session of the Kinston graded school, and we are glad to learn that the patrons of the school are well pleased with the success it has attained, and that its future prospects are brighter than ever. Prof. Claxton has done a good work and we think the people of Kinston appreciate his services.

Kinston continues to grow; old buildings are being moved out of the business part of the town and brick stores erected in their places; many elegant residences have been erected within the last two years; but there is more ornament and taste displayed on the one now being erected by Mr. J. W. Grainger than any we have seen, and how could it be otherwise when Tom Fresson is the contractor?

Superior Court.

The work on the criminal docket was concluded yesterday and the following sentences imposed:

Luke Matlocks; larceny; two years in the penitentiary.
Abram Bryan; injuring public building; two years in county jail.
John Hall; F. and A.; four months in county jail. Appealed.
Moses Taylor; larceny; five years in the penitentiary.
Wm. Hicks; larceny; five years in the penitentiary.
Dempsey Eborn; larceny; five years in the penitentiary.
Israel Merritt; attempt to commit burglary—the man who was wedged in the chimney—six months in the county jail.

The civil docket was taken up and the motion docket was called, and court adjourned until 5 o'clock p. m. when the case of State vs. Garvin Clark for larceny was called. Guilty. In asking judgment in this case the Solicitor stated to His Honor that Garvin was an old pupil of his when he taught school in Edgecombe county ten years ago, and inasmuch as Garvin had violated the precepts which he endeavored to impress upon him, he would ask that he be sentenced to ten years in the penitentiary. The Court so ordered, and adjourned until to-morrow morning 9 o'clock when the civil docket will be taken up.

Memorial Address.
Below we give a few extracts from the address of Dr. H. G. Bates which was delivered at the National Cemetery on Friday last, it being the Federal Memorial day. The address is a good one and the Doctor and his friends may be proud of it.

The Doctor said:
FRIENDS AND COMRADES:—Once more we gather upon this hallowed spot to do honor to the memories of the dead heroes who lie beneath this green sod, who have passed from a state of strife and bitterness to a realm of eternal peace and happiness. Under each of these green mounds lies low the head of a former soldier of the Union—patriots in Freedom's battle slain—and on and around this spot was once the bloody tragedy was performed in which they who lie here, together with many who hear me to-day were the actors. Some of you on the one side, some on the other—each acting his part for a cause that he thought just and right. Here let them rest! "For they sleep their last sleep; they have fought their last battle; no sound can awake them to glory again."

And in thus assembling on each recurring decoration day to do honor to our soldiers dead, by strewing flowers over the graves of our fallen heroes, we only imitate the practice of a time long since passed and of a people far remote. If Pericles spoke truly in his oration at the tomb of the dead who fell at Marathon when he said: "Those States which hold forth to their subjects the greatest rewards of valor always produce the best citizens," this Nation should never want for loyal sons and soldiers.

I cannot mistake the duty that calls you here to-day. I see before me the old and the young, those who watched through the long battle storm for the sunshine of peace, and those who have learned the story of the war at their mother's knee—all alike anxious to do honor to these noble dead.

Comrades, this is a National holiday, a day that is devoted to keeping green the memories of our fallen dead. Let us thank God for the privilege of thus assembling. And let us here in this, "the city of the dead" for whom we have gathered to do honor, show to our former foes that we bear no personal resentment to them or to their fallen dead. Let us exhibit to them the same degree of appreciation and endurance that we tender to many other causes in history, with which we cannot sympathize, but whose powers and virtues we have learned to respect. Their wounds are as bitter as ours; they cherish the memories of their dead as affectionately as we do ours, and over the graves of all, on the one side and on the other, unprejudiced Nature "shines with the same smile and weeps with the same tears."

Let us honor the valor and bravery of our opponents in the late civil and cruel conflict, for in doing so we more than honor ourselves; for the more we dwell upon their heroism, their many trials and privations, their patient endurance and devotion, the more we exalt our own.

In my opinion these annual gatherings should be held, not over the Federal dead alone, nor yet over the Confederates, but over OUR DEAD, the dead of both causes. I would have you bring a wreath of flowers or evergreens to the grave of any and every man who was brave and conscientious enough to fight and die for a cause that he believed to be right.

County Commissioners.
EDITOR JOURNAL:—A very important official act will be performed to-morrow;—the election of a new board of county commissioners; an act that interests every citizen of our county. In my opinion the magistrates whose duty it is to make the selection should lay aside all personal prejudices and be governed by the simple interrogatory and its truthful answer "Has the present board properly performed its duty and has its administration of the affairs of the county been of a valuable character? If upon investigation or because of personal knowledge the answer is YES, then to make a change would be an injustice to the taxpayer. Let us stay by the bridge that carries us safely; it ought not to be a matter of men, but one of business and principle, and unless there can be proven dereliction, incapacity or unwillingness to perform their duties on the part of the present board. I can see no reason for a change. "Let Well enough alone."

La Grange Items.

Other events and news have been overshadowed by that of the annual commencement exercises of La Grange Collegiate Institute. There are, as usual, a quantity of visitors present, many whose faces are familiar and others who are to us unknown. We notice G. W. Stanton, of Wilson, Joe Kinsey and Senator Loftin, of Goldsboro, and many others whose names we can't call to mind just now. Among the fair ones we hear of Miss Nora King, of Wilson, Miss Belle Kinsey, of Goldsboro, Miss Annie Latham, of Pitt, Miss Gertrude Hooker, of Greene, Miss Ross Pope, of your county, Miss Sac. Hodges, of your city, and a lot of other nice little ones whose names we did not learn.

The exercises began Thursday morning and were opened by music from the La Grange Citizen's Band. The address of welcome came from Prof. H. H. Williams, Principal of the school, in a few well chosen words. The programme for the day was announced and proceeded with as follows:

DECLAMATIONS.
Delaney Wooten, subject, Karl the Martyr.
John Aldridge—R. E. Lee.
James G. Williams—True Eloquence.
G. B. Hadley—The Yankee and the Dutchman's Dog.
Robt. Temple—The May Flower.
Arthur Wooten—Sparticus to the Gladiators.
Finley Murphy—Irish Aliens and Scotch Reviewers.
Fresson Wooten—The Price of Peace.
Kirby Sutton—The South Loyal to Her Duty.
Redin Corbit—Independence Day.

READINGS.
Miss Eliza Isler, subject, Parrhasius the Captain.
Kattie Wooten—Village on the Tar.
Ora Bizzell—Dream of Eugene Aram.
Hattie Bynum—Curfew Must not Ring To-night.
Minnie Paris—Pledged with Wine.
Lillian Sanderlin—Mrs. Byrd's Dream.
Ada Bynum—The Miser Fifty Punished.
May Rouse—The Raven.
Hattie Wooten—Joshua Allen's Wife.
Bettie A. Wood—Putting Down the Window.

The exercises were orderly and interesting throughout and we have never seen a more orderly or better behaved audience. Special mentions ought not to be made, when all do so well, and still we think that among the declaimers, Finley Murphy, Preston Wooten, Kirby Sutton, Redin Corbit, probably are mentioned among those who done splendidly. The readings of Misses Kattie Wooten, Ora Bizzell, Hattie Bynum, Lillian Sanderlin, May Rouse and Hattie Wooten are mentioned and we think deservedly so as being excellent.

The evening exercises commenced at 8 o'clock and were under the charge of the Lee Society of the boys and the Phi Alpha Society of the girls, and consisted of debates, symposiums, etc.

Resolved, That woman has done more for religion than man, was discussed by Misses Myrtle Pope and Lizzie Etheridge in the affirmative, and Misses Lillian Dillen and Lillie Rouse in the negative. And just here we are going to say that we have never seen young ladies acquit themselves more creditably. No special mention here—all done very well and that's sufficient.

The Lee Society then read for debate, Resolved, That there be a National aid for education.

Messrs. K. E. Sutton, Finly Murphy, affirmative; Eaton King and J. R. Tingle, negative.

The matter was well discussed on both sides, and the speeches showed that thought and research had been employed. Mr. King being sick, his speech was read by Mr. Temple. The closing argument, by Mr. J. R. Tingle, is very highly spoken of, though we think, all did credit to themselves and subject.

A vote of the audience decided the question in the negative.

The German class was up and occupied a short time in talking with Prof. Williams in "an unknown tongue." At the close, the audience cheered, having probably understood(?) all that was said.

Thus closed the first day of the annual commencement of 1884, of L. C. I. The exercises throughout were highly creditable to teacher and pupil. Friday is the address and Friday night annual concert, and of these we'll speak in our next.

Kinston Items.

Mr. A. D. Parrott, of Kinston, who runs a farm on Falling creek and keeps his corn cobs in wet places, has just purchased a magnificent saddle—not for purposes of accommodation, however, but because he "wants to be an angel and like the angels ride."

Pragmatic Grady, after a laborious effort costing him $10, has managed to get out a circular, announcing himself a Republican candidate for Sheriff of Lenoir county and exhorting every Kinston itemizer because he cannot swallow him whole as he did Sheriff Davis two years ago. The "old campaigner" must excuse us. He paints himself too much like a Democrat to catch Republican votes. The Republican politician, who claims to be the founder of his party and tells us at the same time how he voted for Beaman, Wood, Sutton and the whole Democratic ticket two years ago, need not expect the support of Republicans who are such from principle and not because they want their "bar'l of flour." The "old campaigner" is entirely too anxious and is aiming higher than he can fly. After reading his silly circular, the people, like us, will wonder how the "old campaigner" has managed to keep out of the way of the fool-killer all the days of his life. We cannot enlighten them.

The exercises of Kinston Graded School, for the scholastic year, closed last Thursday night, at the opera house, in a grand, overwhelming ovation, in which nearly one thousand people took part. The evening's pleasant pastime was begun by the little girls with the May-pole dance, going through the intricate mazes of the dance like practiced followers of the Terpsichorean art. It was the sensation and delight of the evening.

Little Sodie Hunter followed with "Rock of Ages," singing exquisitely sweet, while Susie Parrott gave us "A Thought" in melodious song.

"New Year's Eve," a cantata in three parts, followed next. Part I. A review of the months and seasons by Father Time and Old Year. Part II. Father Time and Old Year review the works of the seasons in order. Part III. Old Year is dethroned and the Young Year is introduced by Santa Claus, and Christmas receives the crown and scepter.

Then came the debate in which is discussed the question: "Which deserves the greatest praise, Christopher Columbus for discoverer of America, or Mr. Washington for defender on it?"

After which "Dumb Bells," which gave exercise to every muscle of the body and sends the warm blood coursing through the veins.

"North Carolina," a charade in four parts, wherein are produced the Blind Girl of Castel Caille, the Flower Girl, Three Fishers, "Young America" in Kinston and the Fair Drill.

All these exercises, striking out from the "beaten path" usually given on such occasions, were both a pleasure and relief to the actors and spectators. The Fair Drill was decidedly charming, the young "misses in their teens" being fantastically dressed, bowed and scraped, and fanned and dipped in lines of beauty like the graceful swan.

Henceforth our Graded School is a success. It has lived down all opposition. All honor and praise to Prof. Claxton, Grimaly, and their self-sacrificing lady co-laborers, who have built up this excellent school for the moral, mental and physical development of the powers of our children.

The annual address was delivered Friday, May 30th, by John S. Long, Esq., of New Berne. The reputation of the orator had preceded him, nor did he disappoint the expectations of his audience. It was a chaste and masterly production, pointing out the perils which beset the American people and enforcing the only true education, the education of the heart and the soul.

Prof. J. L. Tomlinson for Superintendent of Public Instruction.

EDITOR JOURNAL:—I am glad that North Carolina is on an educational boom. It is a hopeful sign, and one that cannot be mistaken for her future prosperity. I am especially gratified to see Prof. Tomlinson urged as a suitable candidate for Superintendent of Public Instruction. He is by all odds the best qualified and the most available man in the State for the position.

This position ought to be filled by a representative educator, and not by a politician. A man who has school room experience; a man that can produce enthusiasm; a man that has made teaching his life-work. That man is J. L. Tomlinson, of the Winston graded schools; a graduate of Trinity College, in this State, then taking the first honor at Harvard College; then President of Santa Barba College, Cal., for three years; five years a teacher in Baltimore and student at John Hopkins University; several years in Europe. All these years of earnest application has placed him inferior to no educator in the land. Dr. Mayo, of Boston, said that he was the "educational man of the State."

The graded school building in Winston, planned by him and accepted by the board, is the best school building in the Southern States. It is called "Winston's crowning glory."

He loves the work and has talent to know what to do and how to do it. He has many friends all over the State that would be inspired with zeal to see this young, vigorous, active educator named by the Democratic Convention as their man for Superintendent of Public Instruction.
