A Card to the Delegates of the Weldon Convention

The incidents connected with the holding of the convention of the 2d diswas presented as a candidate for the Congressional nomination are too fresh in the memory of all interested to need repetition. I desire to say that what-ever cause there might have been for irritation should be forgotten, and as far as I am concerned will be forgotten. No one in the district will give a warmer and more cordial support to Mr. Woodard than myself, nor will work harder for the Democratic cause in the 2d district than myself. It only remains for me to thank those good friends who in my absence brought by name before the convention and give me an unsolicited support. Clear for action Democrats; the enemy are in our front! Train your guns on the enemy and on your breasts bid Tyre York and his mule commence the thunder march of war.

WM. W. CARRAWAY. We think it proper to state that Mr. Woodard, in his article on the Weldon convention, is in error in supposing that our informant was W. W. Carraway, who was a candidate before the convention for Congressional honors. Our strictures were written and printed before any line upon the subject was received from that gentleman. We drew our conclusions from the reports North Carolina furnished the com- vote when we consider the fact that he of the delegates and the facts in the As might be expected of him, Mr. It will Tyre York to be weighed in Maj. DEDICATED TO MY MOTHER. You see her, the dear good lady, Her black hair mixed with gray, As she sits at the sunniest window, And smiles at the children's play. She has been such a faithful mother To us, heedless girls and boys, That the least we can do, my friend,

OUR MOTHER.

Is to double all her joys. She shall have, when the winter's firelight

Shines brighi on the parlor wall, With her dear ones all around her, The cosiest seat of all; And the royal place of honor, At the table nicely spread, Shall be her's by acclamation; And the whitest, downiest bed.

She brought us through trouble, and Gleaned from our Exchanges.

Raleigh News and Observer: Yesterday Dr. Worth's condition showed improvement. He was attacked with severe colic Monday afternoon. His attack is not a serious one .---- The Democrats of the invincible fourth district yesterday nominated Gen. William R. Cox for re-election. The contest for the nomination was warm and elicited much interest, more here in Wake county and at Raleigh, however, than elsewhere in the district. -In view of the late day at which the friends of Judge Fowle been since formed and in the counties brought forward his name, after gentlemen in the district had generally committed themselves to the candidacy of other friends, it should be gratifying to that eminent citizen and distinguished Demcrat that a long time and the delegates too im- Executive Committee, and may be re- he received such a strong support.
