The "4th July" passed off almost un noticed. Oettinger Bros. gave the National flag to the breeze and the rain. A large number of colored people assembled at the depot to take the excursion train to New Berne. Nothing inconvenient to move was left behind except "old Chow Chow."

A few surviving horses of the war, it is said, yet work on quiet farms. The gentle creatures have long buried the differences of the past. In Michigan, a Union soldier with a cork leg plows behind a Southern artillery horse. A cannon ball took off the veteran's leg. The horse belonged to the Confederate battery that fired the shot. Horse and man are fast friends, but both are forgotten

A. Slaughter, Esq., of Kinston, and Miss Lou Monroe, formerly of Bladen county, were united in holy wedlock, at Cobb Mill Church, in Lenoir county, 8 o'clock, a. m., the morning of the 3 i July instant. The attendants were J. S. Jackson and Miss Carrie Monroe, and Mr. R. E. Kelly and Miss Fleta Cox. The happy couple took the train at Kin ston the same morning for Asheville, N C., where they expect to spend a four weeks' honeymoon.

A twenty inch emery wheel, used in the Kinston Machine Shops, while making about eighteen thousand revolutions per minute, was torn to pieces last Wednesday, creating a noise like the report of a cannon and hurling the fragments in all directions. Pieces of the broken wheel were thrown through the shop taking a quick trip to "kingdom come."
