

AYER'S Ague Cure

contains an antidote for all malarial disorders which, so far as known, is used in no other remedy. It contains no Quinine, nor any mineral nor deleterious substance whatever, and consequently produces no injurious effect upon the constitution, but leaves the system as healthy as it was before the attack.

WE WARRANT AYER'S AGUE CURE to cure every case of Fever and Ague, Intermittent or Chill Fever, Remittent Fever, Dumb Ague, Bilious Fever, and Liver Complaint caused by malaria. In case of failure, after due trial, dealers are authorized, by our circular dated July 1st, 1882, to refund the money.

THE JOURNAL.

NEW BERNE, N. C., SEPT. 10, 1884.

Mozart.

By his fireside sat the chapelmaster of Salzburg, giving a music-lesson to his daughter, while little Wolfgang, who was just three years old, stood near, listening:
"Thou teachest Nannerl, papa; teach me too," said the little fellow.

"But thou art a baby, Wolfgang, wait my little man," answered the father.

But the little man could not wait, and as soon as he found himself alone he went to the harpsichord, and with his baby-fingers wandering among the keys struck a perfect chord, which brought his father rushing to him, and from that day music-lessons were for him too. He had a wonderful memory for music and advanced rapidly in his studies.

The next year the family went to Munnich, and little Wolfgang and Nannerl were presented at Court and played before the Emperor, Francis I., to the admiration and delight of all who heard them.

This little Wolfgang was the famous Mozart, the music king. When five years of age he composed a concerto for the harpsichord, which was correctly composed and written out but was so difficult that an able musician would have found it impossible to execute it on the harpsichord. His father taught him only on the harpsichord, but he kept a little violin upon which he learned to play without a teacher, and at one time he rendered so well, six trios composed by Menzel, that his father was overwhelmed with joy and astonishment, and called the child "little music-king" by which name he was often afterward called. Before Mozart was eight years old he performed at the Courts of Paris, London, Munich and Vienna, and at Paris he had for a play-fellow the little Maria Antoinette.

He could play the works of the most celebrated masters and composed much himself, dedicating six sonatas to the Queen of England. He traveled extensively in his childhood and played in many churches, and before he was fifteen, he was made a Knight of the Golden Spur, by the Pope, and honors and praises were showered upon him wherever he went.

When fifteen years old he composed his first opera, and though he died at the early age of thirty-five his works are numerous—a rich and glorious legacy to the musical world. His compositions are of various styles, but all are stamped with the grace and beauty of a most gifted genius.

His name is immortal, and for more than one hundred years his sonatas, operas and masses have held a foremost place among classical music.
