He began by an attack upon the record of Mr. Cleveland, and as if to fill in time, he took up the railroad bill veto of the Governor, charging that he had vetoed a bill reducing fares on the elevated railroads in New York City to five cents for laboring men, and by that veto Bergeron, W. endorse your views in Tuesday's issue spreading of fires than additional provision for extinguishing the flames with water.

The city is now heavily burdened with taxes, and I do not think it prudent at all for a third engine to be purchased unless done by private subscription. think the Amoskeag engine could be purchased at a reasonable price, and in cases of emergency would render valuable service.

Though the losses at the late fire are great, they would have been much greater had not the wind been so favorable. But should the wind have been contrary, scarcely enough engines could have been placed to check the infuriated flames where so much inflammable material exists. A large portion of the district is in ashes, and now is the time to decide what kind of buildings shall be erected. Three destructive fires have occurred in the same location within the last two years, and not only is the last one the most serious, but has happened in the worst part of the year-just before the beginning of the busy season. Though the losers at the late fire have my sympathy, yet I believe it is to the interest of all, in the long run, that none but good substantial brick buildings should be erected. I know that wood buildings and those covered with corrugated iron can be put up a little quicker and cheaper, though the iron ones are but little cheaper, than brick ones, still, if those ruinous fires are to be dispensed with, then brick must come. It is amazing to look back within the past few years and see how few brick have been laid in the city of New Berne, but none the more so than the large amount
