THE JOURNAL.
 NEW-BERNE, N. C., OCT. 16, 1884.
 A Temperance Prince.
 There was once a little Prince who taught his grandfather, the old King Astyages, a good lesson, in temperance. The little fellow's name was Cyrus, and when he became a man he did so many great and noble deeds that he was called Cyrus the Great, King of Persia.
 He had been brought up to a very simple mode of life, foregoing all the luxuries and ease that we naturally suppose a young prince should be entitled to, so that he might become accustomed to the hardships that help to make up the life of a great soldier.
 But when he was thirteen years old his mother took him to Media to visit the old King his grandfather, and here he saw all the pride and luxury and magnificent that reigned supreme at the court; for Astyages loved pomp and costly show, and rich apparel. But the thing that most astonished young Cyrus was the intemperance. He had been taught to be strictly temperate, and it surprised and mortified him to see the noble lords, and even the King himself, become foolishly drunk at the great feasts.
 One day Cyrus, in his high, fun-loving spirit, undertook to act as cupbearer for his grandfather. In those days, you know, the king always had a cup-bearer who presented to him his wine, but before the king drank of it, the cup-bearer always tasted it to make sure it was not poisoned.
 Little Cyrus presented the cup to the King with much ease and grace, and the old monarch was delighted; but as he took the cup he said:
 "But my boy, you forgot one thing. You forgot to taste the wine."
 "Not at all," said Cyrus. "It was not through forgetfulness that I omitted that part of the ceremony."
 "Why then?"
 "Because I was afraid there was poison in the liquor," replied the boy.
 "Poison, child?" cried the old King. "Poison, and yet you gave it to me? Why what do you mean?"
 "Yes, grandfather," answered Cyrus. "There is poison enough in it, for at a feast, when the lords of the court, and the guests, drink a little of that liquor, their heads get turned and they act like fools. Your friends hooted and sang and made strange noises, and you yourself could scarcely stand upon your legs."
 "Why," said the King, "have you never seen your father do the same thing?"
 "Never," cried Cyrus.
 "Then what happens to him when he drinks?" asked the King.
 "When he drinks," answered Cyrus, "his thirst is quenched with water."—Kaleidoscope.

WAR! WAR! WAR!
 The greatest political war perhaps for the last century is now about to open, and that every Cleveland or Blaine man may take an active part in this great political fight, it is of great importance that he should commence at once to lay in his supplies of Groceries and Dry Goods at the Great Cheap Cash Store of HUMPFREY & HOWARD'S, that he may give the necessary time to achieve the greatest victory ever gained in these United States. The war has actually begun from the Presidential Chair down to the lowest county offices. Some may cry peace, peace, but there will be no peace until every man shoulders his pocket-book and goes down to the Great Cheap Cash Store of HUMPFREY & HOWARD'S, and buys a supply of Dry Goods, Groceries, Boots and Shoes, etc. Sold at the lowest living prices. dw
