Origin of the Amulet.

A kind of odoriferons amulet, said to be made in Persia, is sold in New York bazaars and is becoming very popular among New York ladies. A Turk in the trade gives this history of the origin of the amulet:

"The legend of the amulet is well known by all women in the Orient. Many years ago Genghis Lhan, the great Tartar warrior, overran Per-sia. The Shah's harem was captured at Teheran, comprising some 300 or 400 beautiful odalisques. These became at once favorites with the hero, but his family was already so large and included so many pretty wives he could not distin-guish his Persian from his Tartar wives. In order to be able to do so, he resorted to the expedient of attaching amulets, perfumed highly, around their necks, which proved quite successful. The hieroglyphics on the obverse side of the charm are supposed to represent the Lhan signature and his proclamation warning others not to interfere with his property. For hundreds of years the amulet was handed down as an heirloom and protection against evil. When the Turkish race became the conquerors of the East they captured these charms and put on the reverse side the crescent, star and the word kismet. Then after many years the Shah permitted the charms to be manufactured and sold as a boon to the human race."

AS HE WAS SAVING .- At one of the theaters the other evening a man who had a seat between his wife and daughter left it at the close of an act for a trip down stairs. When he returned he found a vacant seat two rows back between
